The Greatest Act of Treachery in Irish History

We, the PEOPLE of Ireland, have the power to take our country BACK!

NOW is the Time for the People of Ireland to take matters into THEIR OWN HANDS by withdrawing the funding of the corrupt International BANKSTERS by REFUSING to pay any more interest on loans, credit cards and mortgages.

Our Government have, against the will of the People, BORROWED money to give away to the BANKSTERS in the form of massive bail-outs, using the People - that's YOU and ME, folks - as COLLATERAL. Yep! The working men and women of Ireland are offered as COLLATERAL for huge IMF and ECB loans on the basis that, as tax payers, they will foot the bill. Our ever-increasing taxes and levies are effectively promised to the IMF and ECB as repayment for ever-increasing Government borrowing - this borrowing is being used to bail out the high street banks, who in turn have the AUDACITY to 'lend' that money back to us - AT INTEREST! This is how it REALLY works folks.....

WE ARE BEING FLEECE!

Therefore they have left us with no choice but to retrieve this stolen money ourselves, from the beneficiaries - the BANKS!

By Gabriel Donohoe

The Irish Government has finally passed the harshest budget in the history of the State with further austerity promised for the next three years and perhaps for decades. Taoiseach Brian Cowen and Finance Minister Brian Lenihan have steered Ireland from the booming prosperity of a Celtic Tiger to a ruined shell of a country where unemployment, poverty, emigration, and despair are proceeding to destroy a once proud, industrious people.

Cowen and Lenihan also bear the ignominy of having brought in the International Monetary Fund who, along with EU banksters, are now dictating Irish fiscal policy. The IMF has long had a vulturish reputation for plundering weaker countries by stripping the flesh of its victims down to the bare bones. This repulsive scavenger is well known for promoting austerity and misery, grabbing national assets for its bankster and corporate friends, and leaving the skeleton of a country's economy in its wake. The first piece of offal to be plucked from the Irish carcass by this opportunistic carrion eater was the nation's €20 billion pension fund, the life savings of working people.

As a result of Ireland's dramatic reversal of fortune the names of Brian Cowen and Brian Lenihan are now being reviled as the villains who inflicted horrendous financial disaster upon the Irish people and forced the enslavement of future generations to a criminal cadre of International Banksters.

The words 'treason', 'traitors', and 'treachery' are being increasingly used not only by ordinary citizens but also by certain politicians, economists, business leaders, and celebrities. 'Economic treason' was a term used by the leader of the Labour Party to describe Cowen and Lenihan's blanket guarantee to the banks. And, incredibly, even the country's ostensibly non-partisan police association, the GRA, accused the government of 'treachery' and denounced it as a 'government of national sabotage'.

Today, Cowen and Lenihan are being compared to other traitors in history like Vidkun Quisling, a Norwegian politician who assisted the Nazis to conquer his native country; General Benedict Arnold, an American soldier who changed sides during the Revolution and betrayed his country to the British; and even Judas Iscariot, who betrayed his Master for 30 pieces of silver.

What did Cowen and Lenihan do to earn such public loathing?

The Greatest Act of Treachery in Irish History

On September 29th, 2008, a momentous event occurred. That evening, four of the most senior executives of Ireland's two largest high street banks, Dermot Gleeson and Eugene Sheehy of Allied Irish Bank (AIB) and Brian Goggin and Richard Burrows of Bank of Ireland (BOI), called to Government Buildings for a hastily convened meeting with the Taoiseach, Brian Cowen, and the Minister for Finance, Brian Lenihan. Also present was the Irish Attorney-General, Paul Gallagher.

The banksters were frantic. As the property bubble was beginning to burst, their main rival, Anglo Irish Bank, was in serious trouble and the huge loss of liquidity could bring down the country's entire financial system. Like Anglo Irish, AIB and BOI also had massive exposure to the developers and all were in danger of imminent collapse. The banksters implored the Government to do something, immediately, before the money markets opened the following morning.

Having received such stark news from the banksters, Cowen and Lenihan knew they had to move quickly and decisively. They would have to act, and be seen to act, without bias and without favouring any special interest groups. Their first duty was to ensure the welfare of the nation as a whole and to safeguard the financial interests of all the Irish people.

But in this they failed utterly. One special interest group, the banksters, prevailed spectacularly over the interests of the Irish people. How did the banksters manage to wield such inordinate influence over crucial governmental policy?

A key disturbing fact about this meeting was never commented upon in the mainstream media. On the government side of the table sat Paul Gallagher, the Attorney-General, legal adviser to the Irish Government. On the banksters' side of the table sat Dermot Gleeson, the AIB chairman and himself a former Irish Attorney-General. But, apart from both men holding the senior law office of the land, a more sinister connection between them remained undisclosed. They were both Bilderbergers.

The Bilderbergers

For those who haven't heard of the Bilderbergers, they are a brotherhood of unelected international banksters, corporatists, politicians, and others who meet secretly every year to formulate and manipulate world policy in finance, economics, trade, and any other area that they can control for their own selfish, globalist interests.

It may well be that the presence of the two Bilderbergers, Gleeson and Gallagher, was just a coincidence but, considering such incredibly high stakes, it can be argued that Gallagher's attendance as Attorney-General at such a crucial meeting generated a monumental conflict of interest. His Bilderberger connection clearly compromised him as legal adviser to the Irish Government, especially when his Bilderberger pal, Gleeson, was about to be on the receiving end of a whopping government bailout.

Bilderberger Dermot Gleeson

After a surprisingly short discussion with some members of the cabinet, the Attorney-General, and top civil servants, Cowen and Lenihan arrived at an ominous decision. They decided that the Government would guarantee all the liabilities of six Irish banks – not just customer and interbank deposits but also the full exposure of all bondholders! This amounted to some 450 billion euro, an astronomical figure which, if ever called upon, would destroy the country.

With the stroke of a pen Cowen and Lenihan shifted hundreds of billions of private debt incurred by greedy, fraudulent banksters and dumped it onto the backs of the Irish people. This was an incredible act of treachery against the Irish nation. What could possess these two politicians to put their people into impossible debt and penury – perhaps for generations – just to save a few mega-rich banksters from taking a loss on their reckless gambling? Was it utter ineptitude or was it something more sinister than that?

As Marcellus said to Horatio in Shakespeare's Hamlet, 'Something is rotten in the State of Denmark.' He said 'Denmark', but he might well have been describing present-day Ireland. This bank guarantee deal stinks to high heaven!

Inflicting a risk exposure of €450 billion on the Irish nation was tantamount to state suicide. The willing and needless placement of an entire people into such peril could only be the result of criminal incompetence or criminal collusion. There could be no other explanation, except, of course, criminal insanity. Take your pick. Are Cowen and Lenihan criminally inept, corrupt, insane or all of the above?

To put the enormity of the hazard to the nation into perspective let's compare it to U.S Treasury Secretary Hank Paulson's 2008 bank bailout of $700 billion which was then strenuously opposed by the great majority of the American people. The Irish bailout was the equivalent of more than $585 billion dollars, not a far cry from the $700 billion that so appalled and angered most Americans. Consider that the U.S. has a population of 300 million while Ireland only has a population of less than 4.5 million, much the same as the state of Louisiana.

At 3.30am the four bankers left. According to Shane Ross, author of 'Bankers', they had 'put the gun to the Government's head and the ministers had delivered.'

Ireland was aghast. Cowen and Lenihan said the bailout was necessary to preserve Ireland's creditworthiness with 'the markets'. This was hogwash and was said so by many people at the time, including leading economists. (The fallacy of the ministers' thinking is borne out by the approach of the plucky Icelandic people who refused to take on private bankster debt and whose economy is now in a much healthier position than that of Ireland.) But Lenihan persisted with the bailout declaring that it would be 'the cheapest bailout in history'. Those words, like the ghost in Hamlet, would soon come back to haunt him.

Cowen and Lenihan then proceeded to pour taxpayers' money into the banks, capitalizing the high street lenders to the tune of some €13.5

billion. This figure did not even include the requirements of Anglo Irish Bank, the biggest culprit of fraudulent lending, who Lenihan said could be saved with a €4 billion bailout. As time progressed the Minister of Finance continually revised his figures upwards, going to €12 billion, €18 billion, €24 billion, and now the figure is hovering around €35 billion. The Irish people will never see a single cent of the tens of billions poured into that black hole that is Anglo Irish Bank. This cannot be described as anything other than an act of outrageous criminality.

NAMA

Another fiasco in the making, the brainchild of Lenihan and Cowen, is NAMA (National Asset Management Agency), set up to restore the banks' balance sheets by buying their toxic loans to the tune of some €54 billion of taxpayer's money. This is another huge and needless risk that is likely to go disastrously wrong and which hangs eternally over Irish taxpayers like the Sword of Damocles. The slightest miscalculation and the sword falls – with devastating effect.

This writer, and many others, pointed out at the time that there was a much better short-term solution to the Irish banking problem. The Government could have let the banks fail – that's what happens in capitalism when businesses are reckless or make mistakes – and set up a state bank. A state bank could have created all the credit the country needed with a much, much smaller outlay. Through fractional reserve lending, a bank can create some twelve and a half times the amount of credit that it holds in assets. For example, if a state bank is capitalised with €10 billion it can lend out €125 billion. With only €20 billion in capital a state bank could create and lend out €250 billion. This would have boosted Irish businesses and given the economy a huge injection and would have obviated the need to go back to the exploitative money markets.

(It is important to point out that this would be a short-term solution only. The real cause of global financial chaos and prohibitive national debt is the permitting of private banking cartels to create a nation's money, money that is based on debt and bears interest and which makes an immense fortune for the international banksters – to the impoverishment of the people.)

But Cowen and Lenihan seemed not to be focussed on what was good and efficacious for the people of Ireland but on how to save a few criminal banksters from incurring gigantic losses.

Before the bank guarantees, Ireland had a manageable sovereign debt. But after taking on the private debts of reckless, fraudulent banksters Cowen and Lenihan drove Ireland into insolvency. Interest on Irish government bonds rose dramatically and threatened to destabilise the Euro. Uncertainty about Ireland's ability to handle its deficit caused unrest in Portuguese and Spanish bond markets. There were concerns too about Belgium and Italy. The EU, fearful that panic and contagion would spread and collapse the Euro, bullied the Irish Government

Actions that should be taken as a matter of urgency:

- Defaulting on private bankster debt which is not a just or proper debt of the Irish people.
- Leave the Euro and return to the Irish Punt. (And consider leaving the EU altogether and take back control of our seas which have been plundered of hundreds of billions of euro of fish stock by other EU nations.)
- End Fractional Reserve Banking and take the power of money creation back from private, criminal banking cartels. The Government would then issue debt-free, interest-free money for the benefit of all the people.
- Spend this debt-free money on hospitals, education, sustainable energy, ports & harbours, transportation, roads, and infrastructure such as the 100+ year old water and sewage systems that are about to collapse.
- Take full control of all oil, gas, and mineral deposits on land and within our territorial waters.
- Pay a monthly dividend, or basic income, to every adult and child, such as that described in Social Credit or as explained in 'The Cook Plan' by Richard C. Cook.
- Promote organic farming so that we are more self-sufficient and need to import less and less foreign foodstuffs.
- Encourage the use of natural medicines and natural health therapies so that the people have real freedom of choice.
- Reduce the number of seats in parliament, abolish the senate and useless quangos, and use the internet more to interface with our politicians and government.
- Make the Mainstream Media truly independent so that they will return to being the proper watchdogs of the people.
- Promote the arts and artists so that we may discover our true spiritual nature and live in peace and harmony and abundance on this wondrous planet of ours.

If a new Irish government implements the actions listed above, the country will quickly achieve unrivalled prosperity and contentment and could well become a guiding light for momentous reform in other nations of the world.

into taking a joint EU/IMF bailout. The high placed members of the self-serving Brussels elite were willing to impose hardship and needless austerity upon the people of Ireland in order to save their precious Euro and to preserve their positions of opulence and power.

The Irish economy per se did not need a bailout, but Irish banks did. The IMF does not lend to banks but only to sovereign countries. (That way, they can force a country to bleed its taxpayers to get their money back.) Cowen and Lenihan then proceeded to sell the idea of an EU/IMF loan to the country as a 'rescue package' for the Irish nation. This was a complete lie. It was a rescue package mainly for German, British, and French banks who had recklessly and greedily loaned billions to Irish banks during the Celtic Tiger boom.

David McWilliams, Irish economist, broadcaster, and writer, says of the IMF, "It is not here to bail us out; it is here to bail [the banks] out. The bailout is a bailout for the banks of Germany and France and the Irish taxpayer foots the bill. It is that simple. And where will the EU and IMF money come from? It will be borrowed from the very investment banks that will be bailed out. So they will get interest payments from us, in order that we pay for their mistakes."

This view is echoed by Dr. Constantin Gurdgiev, adjunct lecturer in Finance at Trinity College, Dublin, who likens the ECB/IMF bailout to 'corporate welfare' (as opposed to social welfare). "It's worse than corporate welfare, it's corporate welfare with a massive moral hazard loaded on top. This is an undemocratic, corporatist transfer of wealth from ordinary citizens to a tiny group of people: bank bondholders..."

Just Who ARE the Bondholders?

Just who are these precious bondholders that Cowen and Lenihan would bind and bankrupt the country in order to make up their 'gambling' losses?

Senator David Norris
Silenced for reading out names of bond-holders

Senator and presidential hopeful David Norris tried to read out their names under parliamentary privilege in the Irish Senate but was quickly silenced. It seems that Cowen and Lenihan and the Irish Government do not want the people to know that they have been put into debt slavery for the benefit of some of the wealthiest, most fraudulent banksters in the world. The names of these bondholders are now a matter of public record, thanks to investigative journalists like Guido Fawkes (www.order-order.com).

Some of the more familiar names among the four score or so major bondholders are Goldman Sachs, one of the most despised banks on Wall Street whose name is synonymous with greed, sleaze, and fraud. Max Keiser, broadcaster and former broker & options trader, says, 'Goldman Sachs are scum. I mean that's the bottom line. They have basically co-opted the U.S. Government, they have co-opted the Treasury Department, the Federal Reserve functionality. They've co-opted the Obama administration. And Barack Obama dances to Goldman Sach's tune. They are really crooked and abominable in what they've done.'

Keiser continues, with remarkable candour, "Just remember, Hank Paulson held Congress hostage, took them in the back room and said give us $700 billion or we're gonna crash the market. He's an arsonist; he's an outlaw. And yet he's given praise. If you go down the list, they're all Goldman Sachs scum, whether it's Hank Paulson, whether it's Geithner...you know Geithner has very strong ties to Goldman Sachs...and of course all these banking bonuses are paid out to all their cronies who are Goldman Sachs scum."

Bilderberger Queen Beatrice
of the Netherlands

Another Anglo Irish Bank bondholder is the Rothschilds Bank, Zurich; the Rothschild family are reputed to have owned half the wealth of Europe a century and a half ago – how much do they own now? And most of the remaining bondholders are worth an accumulation of some twenty trillion euro. An Irish default would involve such an insignificant fraction of their wealth that it would hardly cause them to raise their eyebrows. Yet Cowen and Lenihan forced crippling debt upon the Irish people for many years to come in order to repay the banksters every single cent of their reckless investments.

One great irony amid all this debt and despair is the great wealth recently discovered in the gas fields off the west coast of Ireland. The Corrib gas field alone is reckoned to be worth well over €420 billion, enough to pay off all of Ireland's debts and make the country vastly rich. According to the Petroleum Affairs Division there is even more gas and oil off the west coast, perhaps as much as 13 trillion euro or beyond, enough to make millionaires of every man, woman, and child in Ireland.

What did the Irish Government do with this €420 billion windfall from the Corrib field? They gave it away to Royal Dutch Shell for nothing. Yes, nothing! In an incredible move, the government cut the State's share from 50% to zero on all its offshore oil and gas and abolished all royalties.

Why would they do such a crazy thing?

For an answer to that you'll have to ask the then minister, Ray Burke, who was later convicted and jailed for political corruption on other matters.

Royal Dutch Shell, with its monthly revenues fluctuating between $25 billion and $45 billion, certainly doesn't need the money as much as the Irish people do. Royal Dutch Shell is a key Bilderberg asset; its principal shareholder is Queen Beatrix of Holland, a long-time member of Bilderberg which was founded by her father,

Do you know this man?
Well he owns your gas and oil!
'Sir' Evelyn de Rothschild

Prince Bernhard, a former officer of Hitler's SS. Giving these plutocrats billions, and perhaps trillions, in oil and gas for absolutely nothing is criminally obscene and utterly enraging. These energy resources rightfully belong to the Irish people and it's not for individual politicians, whether corrupt or incompetent, to give them away for nothing.

Looking forward, there will soon be a new government in Ireland. It is now time for the Irish people to take a firm stand. In the coming election campaign they must warn incoming government hopefuls that there HAS to be radical change. The criminal pledges of an outgoing government of traitors MUST be dismantled and consigned to the trash can, along with their authors. The people will not stand for more of the same old deceitful gombeen politics;

they are in no mood for mealy-mouthedness or ineffectual tinkering with a failed system. They demand nothing less than clear, decisive, and even ruthless change. They demand leaders of integrity, innovation, and courage. And they demand a decent living for themselves, their children, and future generations yet unborn. There can be no going back!

SAME CIRCUS

DIFFERENT CLOWNS!

■ Neil Foster

So, we have a challenge to Brian Cowen's 'leadership'.

Is that what we call the betrayal of the country these days?

Does anyone really think that another puppet put in power by those in the shadows will make the slightest difference to the state of the country?

Is a different puppet politician going to roll back the massive fraudulent banker 'bailouts' and give the people a refund?

Will a different puppet politician take back the massive oil and gas reserves of the West coast that were corruptly given away for FREE to the queen of Holland (Small 'q' deliberate!) that could make this country the richest in Europe wiping out all debts of the country and giving every citizen in Ireland a quality of life unsurpassed in the Western world?

Does anyone think another puppet political party will do these things?

The simple answer is 'NO'!

None of these parasitical traitors serve the people of Ireland. They only serve themselves through corruption and fraud for the ultimate benefit of their elite banking masters. Make no mistake, these politicians, apart from being low level psychopaths, are criminals. They also believe themselves to be part of the big picture in their delusions of grandeur when in reality they are the 'bottom feeders' and 'useful idiots' in a pyramidal system which will ultimately destroy them and their families as much as they have destroyed the lives of generations of ordinary citizens of the country.

Perhaps the people of Ireland may wake up to the tyranny being perpetrated upon them before poverty and utter despair take hold?

Perhaps the people of Ireland in cooperation with the police services, including the army, will finally see that there is a prison being built around them which will resemble nothing less than a reservation run by the lackeys of the British empire who still pull the strings of power today in Ireland.

Any Irish politician, newspaper editor, businessman, so called 'expert' eCONomists and other traitorous 'patheticos' who go along with this sick and utterly corrupt system should be routed from office and positions of influence and charged with treason with the appropriate maximum sentence.

Perhaps we could start with Cowen when he bows out, no doubt into a cushy job given to him by his banker slavemasters?

Direct Democracy Ireland

Shifting Power Back To The People

□ Jaan Van De Ven

WWW.DIRECTDEMOCRACYIRELAND.ORG

WHAT IS DIRECT DEMOCRACY?

Direct democracy is a system of government that gives citizens the ability to have a say in government decisions, and allows them to propose or veto legislation and other initiatives. It also gives citizens the power to recall or sack elected representatives or ministers who are not working for the interest of the people. A number of countries around the world successfully use direct democracy provisions, including Switzerland. There is a growing trend worldwide and burgeoning fervour towards the concept of direct democracy, such as in the UK and US.

A HISTORY OF DIRECTDEMOCRACY IN IRELAND

The founding fathers of the Constitution of the Irish Free State (1922) gave the powers of initiative and referendum to the Irish people, in articles 47 & 48. However, these rights were never implemented as the first party to get into power removed these rights from the people of Ireland and gave those powers to themselves. Now only a challenge to the Constitution, or the politicians can initiate a referendum. DDI aims to reintroduce these rights to end hypocrisy of what we call democracy in the Republic of Ireland.

DEMOCRACY 2.0: A EUROPEAN REALITY CHECK

We always upgrade to the new and improved version of everything. Shouldn't the European Union be an upgrade to democracy as well? Find out why strengthening the power of the Irish referendum through Direct Democracy is the next step.

IRELAND IS A PLEBISCITE

This is about whom controls the Irish referendum agenda: the government or the people. When the government or the majority party in parliament controls the referenda agenda, they just schedule other referendums until the people vote the way they want, and 'then and only then' it is a binding outcome. This is called a Plebiscite. The people complain that 'this is not democratic', but it is, because through the constitution 'we the sovereign people of Ireland' give the government the power to do so. No signatures need to be gathered, no major debate, the parliament just votes to schedule another referendum.

DIRECT DEMOCRACY

When the people control the referendum agenda, then the outcome of the vote is binding, 'NO means NO and YES means YES'. When the people control the agenda, the people gather enough signatures to have a referendum on 'whatever issue, whenever they want', and the outcome is binding. In this definition of democracy, only the constitution or the people can cause a referendum to happen, not the government. Let's be clear, the government has NO POWER to schedule a referendum, only the people or the constitution does. This is called 'Direct Democracy'.

DEMOCRACY 2.0!

Irish referenda are triggered by the constitution and controlled by the parliament. To change this, we need to change the Irish constitution. If the EU can change our constitution from the top down, then 'we the sovereign people of Ireland' can certainly change it from the bottom up. This single act would strengthen the democratic power of the people and truly upgrade Irish democracy.

CAN WE DO THIS?

The concept of direct democracy is not new in Ireland and the people previously did have Direct Democratic powers in the Constitution of the Irish Free State (1922) given to them by their founding fathers under articles 47 & 48. In the same document, Article 50 gave the Oireachtas the power to amend the constitution if the newly amended constitution is put up for a referendum vote within 2 years. In 1928 the Irish Democracy was severely weakened when the presiding Oireachtas amended the constitution by removing Articles 47 & 48. This one act ended the people's right to initiate referendum as a way to have a final say in the political decision making process.

An organization called Direct Democracy Ireland aims to reintroduce these rights to end this hypocrisy of what we call democracy. DDi will be supporting all candidates in the next general elections who recognise the need for direct democracy and will fully commit to having it entered into legislation. This is the perfect time to do it. We can focus the resulting 'anger and outrage' to push the idea of a constitutional change through. If successful the people's voice will be returned, and Ireland will once again become a sovereign nation. What are the bigger picture implications of this strategy for Europe? The short answer is that if Ireland makes this change, then Ireland can truly lead the way to a more democratic Europe.

HERE'S WHY

The beauty of direct democracy is that the people can let their leaders legislate with the comfort of knowing that they can step in at any time, create a referendum, and change or 'throw out' new or old laws when they begin to affect their lives in negative ways. Politicians will not push for unpopular laws when they know the people can step in and throw them out. This means that the Irish people can allow the EU to continue unifying and step in with referendum veto powers on future EU laws or competencies that do not serve them. You will not need to understand all the intricacies of each treaty, hardly anyone does, however you will know that you have the ability to change what it is to live with their results. Switzerland has had 'direct democracy', for more than 150 years. Switzerland is a federation of 26 autonomous cantons or provinces (the EU has 27 countries) and is considered the most advanced democracy on the planet. They have 'direct democracy' on every level of government; local, regional and national. To the Swiss it's all about preserving and expanding the citizen's sovereign power of referendum.

Can Fine Gael or Sinn Fein save us? Well... no.

□ Alan K - www.WeAreChange.ie

Some people seem to think that different political parties or allegiances can help solve this problem, for example that Sinn Fein are really against Fianna Fail, when they are really just hijacking the mood in the country.

Politicians will not solve anything, they are not trained in it. They don't actually know how to look at the problems of the country and figure out how to solve them. They are trained in basic book-cooking and NLP, (Neuro Linguistic Programming) on how to present bad news well and smile for the cameras for the propaganda pieces we see on RTE and the nation press such as The Irish Independent & The Irish Times. The politicians are merely figureheads for the large financiers and banking interests that long ago bought this country. Complaining about a politician's "decisions", telling them to change or voting for a different one can be closely compared to the pop music industry.

Imagine for a second that you don't like Britney Spears latest album: you think the video is awful, you think the lyrics are unfit for children, you don't like the album cover and the actual copy you bought skips on track 13. Of all of these things, there is very little you can do.

MAYBE if you went to the shop and made a fuss they'd exchange the copy for you but that's it. They won't give you a refund, they'll just give you another copy of the same awful album. Standing outside the HMV you bought it from picketing against Britney isn't going to do anything. Neither is going to HMV head office. You might get a €10 gift voucher at most.

Breaking into Britney's house and threatening that you'll burn it down unless she does something is not going to change anything. She doesn't have any power, she is just a figurehead for Britney Spears Inc. Certain people write her lyrics, other guys do her videos, someone else composes her "music", another team markets the album to children, another team outsources printing of the CDs, etc. Almost none of these people are DIRECTLY controlled by the industry, they are not afraid of the Man Behind the Curtain, they don't know the whole agenda, but they are cogs in it. Cogs that know their place. Cogs that know not to rock the boat or they lose their job. They are part of one big machine.

In the current political & economic global system even if you got a chance to take down or, as some have threatened to do at recent marches, kill all the people that you think are the problem, they would be soon replaced by someone else. Nobody would even have to choose to replace them, it would just happen organically, like leaving a parking space free in the City Centre. We can't expect to change anything by taking down the government, or even the bankers that control it. It is the 5000 year old, hierarchical, pyramid shaped tyrannical system that is wrong. The system needs to change. No one has the right to tell you what to do or demand money from you, least of all some corrupt government!

What is the best way to make this change? Think about the music industry again and the answer becomes obvious. Stop supporting the system. Stop legitimising the system by voting for criminals. Stop paying taxes NOW where it is within your power to do so. They are only going to be used to fund the next generation of Irish Bank bondholders, such as the famous Rothschild dynasty. All income tax is used for is to pay off the so-called "National/Sovereign Debt". A Sovereign cannot be indebted to a fictional entity like a corporation/government.

We need self governance and community level co-ordination on employing private companies to do the work the state overcharged us on, different areas with different currencies for that area, or a LETS (short explanation needed) system, and a currency for international trading, backed by our oil reserves, rather than DEBT, and a voluntary law system based on common law; "Do no harm, cause no loss; your rights end where others begin".

The only politician I'd ever listen to (and still be wary of) is one who plans on reducing corporation status to less than that of a human being and dissolving outdated ideas like land ownership and corporations owning anything. No more income tax. We don't need it! VAT pays for services that we use. No more complying with the Gardaí on non-criminal acts. They are acting as revenue collectors for a fascist government and it's time they realised that and return to their oath to the people.

The Crash, The Bailout And The Theft Of Ireland’s Energy Resources

☐ Colin Ryan

As Ireland’s government steers the country into an economic black hole there are many of us left scratching our heads as to why they are not using the massive wealth of this nation to fund the recovery and our future, and to tell the bankers where to go with their imaginary gambling debts.

As I’ve watched this country self-destruct over the last two years since the derivatives bubble was burst, I ask myself why is it happening? Why in a country rich with investment, talent, and resources and with a reasonably healthy economy with good exports, is the whole thing spiraling into a never ending cycle of un-payable debt? Believe me it is un-payable, just like all the third world debt issued by the IMF and World Bank before this.

We all know by now that the bankrupt international banks, who issue credit out of thin air, crippled the industries that support our jobs and thus our economy and sent the whole world crashing into what many believe from understanding history, is a deliberate recession from which, as history shows, the main banks will once again come out the other side more wealthy and larger than before. One need only look at the 1907 and 1929 crashes to see this consolidation process in action in the years that followed.

None of us Joe Public were in particularly problematic debt. Just the normal loans for a home and a car, nothing special. Nothing we couldn’t manage on our salaries. Yet still here we are now indebted, by the actions of a government with no mandate, to the tune of around €18,000 for every man, woman and child in the country. The interest alone will cost around €3,000 per year in extra taxes for every working person in the country before any of the principle loan is paid off.

So how are we expected to pay back this loan for a debt that we never incurred in the first place? A debt that only exists in the ups and downs of market values and shares in a fictional world of computerised credit, and not a single solid asset in sight. Yes, you guessed it. We are to pay the fictional debt with our real assets. Those being our labour, our children’s labour and our grandchildren’s labour, as well as the selling off of our public services to private corporations owned by the banks to be run for profit by them. These will include our roads for tolling, our health services, our utilities like the ESB and Bord Gais, and our water suppliers, even our ports and airports.

It doesn’t stop there though because as well as these institutions and all their associated assets, which will undoubtedly be asset stripped, the bankers are looking to take our €20+ billion of national pension fund which has been accumulated to pay the pensions of the people of Ireland in just such a difficult period. Finally, and the nub of this article, the international bankers will be given by our government the country’s tangible wealth in the form of land, minerals, our forestry, and most importantly our fuel resources in gas and oil.

Unbeknown to most people in Ireland, this country is one of the wealthiest countries in the world for natural mineral wealth. An inspection of the applications for mining licenses will reveal among other precious minerals like zinc and lead, a wealth of silver and gold buried under the ground. In fact the volumes of minerals found in Ireland per square mile make it the richest country in the world for mineral deposits. This is very valuable and why this has not been exploited is unexplained. Yet there is another kind of gold that Ireland possesses in spades that is being exploited now. The black gold !

Off the west coast of Ireland there is an enormous volume of oil and gas. The government (Dept. of Communications, Energy Natural Resources) themselves valued west coast deposits in 2008 at €540 billion although the price of oil and gas then was a fraction of what it is now. This is a resource that could give everyone in Ireland free energy in the same way that Norway funnel their oil wealth to their people, and still make huge profits selling energy to the UK and Europe.

The Corrib oil field currently being exploited by Shell, that we hear about for all the wrong reasons, is the only oil and gas field the public are aware of, but there are huge basins of oil and gas known to exist off Limerick and Kerry. One in particular called Dunquin gas field which is a proven field and is described by the operator (Exxon/Mobil) as “one of the biggest fields in the world” containing an estimated 25 trillion cubic feet of gas and over 4 billion barrels of oil. This alone could keep Ireland running for over 60 years.

The reserves off the west and north west coasts in total have been estimated at around 130 billion barrels of oil and 50 trillion cubic feet of gas. A virtual underwater Saudi Arabia. Yet it doesn’t end there. The Lough Allen Basin is a huge inland gas field in the northwest which has been known for some 40 years now and contains 9.4 trillion cubic feet of gas. Enough to power Ireland for the next 25 years but it has has yet to be tapped. There are known fields off the south coast that have yet to be announced.

Furthermore, new oil and gas basins have been announced this year off the coast of Dublin by Tony O’Reilly’s company Providence Resources and it’s UK partners. O’Reilly is also partnering Exxon in Dunquin. The east coast fields have been estimated in the hundreds of billions in value to Ireland and yet along with the riches of the west and south, the inland gas and the wealth of minerals that we are literally tripping over here, we are still bankrupt ! Does this make any sense to you?

Unfortunately over the last 35 years successive governments have eliminated all of Ireland’s rights to capitalise on it’s own resources. They have legislated away their percentage share of the gas and oil down from 50% to 0%. Yes zero. So the oil and gas is wholly owned by the oil companies royalty free. Successive ministers like Ray Burke and Bertie Ahern have been instrumental in this process which even saw the reduction in tax on oil profits to only 25% where other countries charge almost 70%. This also is only payable after all exploration and development costs are deducted as well as future decommissioning costs which effectively negates the corporation tax too.

Ireland should be the richest country in Europe with the majority of Europe’s oil and gas and fishing waters, as well as the richest mineral deposits. Yet our government has given the fisheries away to the EU, many of the mining operations are owned by foreign companies and now all the energy reserves have been given away to large multinational companies who are under no obligation to even sell the gas or oil to Ireland and we will be forced to buy our own gas and oil back at market prices from the oil giants.

This situation cannot possibly be accidental. The legislating away of our resources was a deliberate act and in this writers opinion it would seem to be a criminal act of some description. This kind of intergenerational legislative deceit could only be done with cooperation and foreknowledge and looks on the surface to be the biggest fraud ever perpetrated in the history of the state.

It even far exceeds the apparent fraud of the bank bailout wherein we the people are paying off UK and German banks, who held high risk bonds in bad banks, by using loans from the very same UK and German banks to pay their bonds, and we are charged interest for the privilege of bailing out their gambling debts to boot. Does this seem right to anyone except our politicians? Nobody of sound mind could fail to see the deliberate fraud of this and the role being played by our government in assisting this.

When the government accept this IMF bailout they will be relinquishing control of the nation and handing over the financial management of the country to the IMF, which in effect is only a front for the UK and German banks that funded the bailout. It is therefore they who will decide that Irelands assets are sold off and to who. Watch this space and we will find with very little investigation that subsidiary companies of the banks may well benefit greatly from this fire sale.

Already Bertie Ahern in his cushy new job as head of the International Forestry Fund, a corporation set up by a Swiss financial services provider Helvetia Wealth AG, is bidding to buy and privatise Coalite, which controls all Irelands forestry. This would mean 7% of Ireland’s land mass would be in the hands of one of these international banks. It was a recommendation of the An Bord Snip Nua report in 2009 and the appointment of Ahern in 2010 tells me that this was probably already a done deal before the bailout ever reared it’s head.

An Open Letter To John Gormley
Minister For The Environment
(Hates Fluoride - Loves Water Meters)

Please cut out and post to:

Minister Gormley,
Department of the Environment,
Heritage and Local Government,
Custom House,
Dublin 1.

Dear John,

*I really hope you take the time to read this letter because, after all, you are a public representative - elected by the people of Ireland.
I just need to know what your stance is on this urgent health issue, which I know you are familiar with.*

WWW.FLUORIDEREPORTS.COM

On RTE's Prime Time program a few years back, you categorically stated that fluoride was not safe for babies and that baby’s milk formula should not be made with fluoridated water.

You also claimed that fluoridation of the water was also linked to bone cancer. Which brings me to my next point, becuse you are the man spearheading the roll-out of water meters to all homes on the island of Ireland.

If you, yourself, do not recommend fluoridation of the public water supply as being safe for human consumption, why is it then john, that since you have been elected to government, you have not led a campaign to remove this toxin from the public water supply?

And why is it John, that you now want to TAX us on this toxic water supply through the introduction of your water meters?

So, John, have you completely flip-flopped on this issue and decided to put the public’s health aside and humiliate them even further by taxing them for this toxin when you, by your own admission, believe fluoridation of the water supply is unsafe for human consumption.

Please Respond To This John.

The Public Have A Right To Know.

All the Best John,

The level of collusion to pull off this takeover of assets has to go to the highest levels of government in order to orchestrate this over such a long period of time, because not only was the oil and gas legislation nullified but so was the banking control legislation in the same period.

Indeed if we look to those people who have been in positions of power and also regularly attended secret meetings like the annual Bilderberg meeting or the Tri-lateral Commission meeting along with all of these bankers, oil companies, other multinationals and politicians in Europe and worldwide, then we may be seeing the root of the conflict of interests of our own politicians and should ask who are they really working for?

If these meetings aren’t shady enough it is made more suspicious by the fact that the Tri-lateral Commission meeting this year was held over three days in Dublin this Spring, without ever getting a mention on the national news despite 300 of the world’s richest and most powerful people being in Dublin and being dined by the President.

If we want to know why we are being asset stripped, then this is a good place to start to find your culprits.

Your Health is Your Wealth.... isn't it?

■ Ash - WeAreChange.ie

To most people the modern world is a wonderful thing to behold. For many, we are at the peak of our society. We have fast cars, wireless internet, mobile phones and above all we, in the Western World, are very comfortable and a lot of us are well off being so comfortable. Many people cast a blind eye to the wrongs in the world however, if we look beneath the surface of the supposed “peak of society”, it is very obvious to see that all is not well.

Take health for example. Everyone knows the old saying “Your health is your wealth”. If we take this into consideration, the wealth of a society depends upon the health of the individuals within that society – Are we as wealthy as we think?

Let’s take a look of the overall health of the people in the Western World and many of the diseases that affect us:

• Heart disease is the number one killer of people in Ireland, England, America, Canada and Wales. In 2007 nearly 131,00 adults in the Republic of Ireland and over 75,000 adults in Northern Ireland had a coronary heart condition. (CHD, angina and heart attack) according to www.publichealth.ie.

• Cancer is almost considered to be a common disease in these modern times. In 2007, cancer caused about 13% of all human deaths which is about 7.6 million people. In Ireland in 2006, 7,868 people died of cancer according to The National Cancer Registry Ireland. One in three people will also get cancer in their lifetime according to Cancer Research UK and The Cancer Prevention Society.

• Strokes are the leading cause of adult disability in the United States and Europe. Strokes are also the number two cause of death worldwide.

• In 2006, there were 26.6 million sufferers of Alzheimer’s disease worldwide, the first case of which was not identified until 1901.

• In 2000, at least 171 million people worldwide were suffering from diabetes.

• Arthritis and other rheumatic conditions have been diagnosed in 21% of America adults. Nearly two-thirds of arthritis patients are under 65. More than 60% of arthritis patients are women. By 2030, the number of people with arthritis is expected to rise to 67 million, reflecting a 40% increase by today’s standards.

This is before we even get onto auto immune disorders like chronic fatigue syndrome, Epstein-Barr virus, lupus, fibromyalgia, and AIDS; not to mention obesity, back problems, lung disease, depression, anxiety and even suicide. Looking at the rise in these diseases, one must to question where this has rise has come from. In my opinion, I think it may be because we have moved away from being ‘natural man’ to ‘modern man’. ‘Natural man’ lived close to nature, eating with the seasons, what was growing naturally around him. As a result we ate a more balanced diet. ‘Modern man’ lives in a high stress environment, pollution is everywhere. Food is eaten on the go and with as much convenience as possible. Statistics from the Institute of Optimum Health give a better idea as to how our diet has changed significantly over time:

• The Caveman ate a diet that consisted of about 45% carbohydrates, 34% protein and 21% fat.

• The Peasant Farmer would have eaten a diet consisting of about 75% carbohydrates, 12% protein and 13% fat.

• Modern Man eats about 28% carbohydrates, 12% protein, 40% fat and 20% sugar.

• Our ideal diet should consist of about 60% carbohydrates, 15% protein and 25% fat. ***

Let’s take a closer look at what ‘modern man’ actually eats. In the last century – particularly the last three decades – we have started to eat more fats, of the wrong kind, much more sugar and refined carbohydrates. If we look at modern lifestyle we see that the more and more it speeds up, the less time we have to prepare fresh food and we are becoming more reliant on processed foods. Most of the companies who produce these processed foods care little for our health and wellbeing. They work as a means to gain profit. This food is often highly refined as it lasts longer and is stuffed with chemicals so that it looks and tastes artificially appealing. In the process it is stripped of all its essential nutrients. Therefore these foods simply fill you instead of actually feeding you.

If you consider your body to be a machine, then you must consider your fuel. It is common knowledge that if you put bad fuel in your machine it won’t run at its optimum performance level. Why should your body be any different? Our bodies, as human beings, are made up of two-thirds water, one-quarter protein. The rest is fat with a few vitamins and minerals. There is not a single cell in your body that lives longer than seven years. You are not the same person you were a decade ago as your cells are constantly dying and repairing. Therefore every single molecule in your body comes from water and food you eat. In order to keep the body functioning we must continue to replace the basic composition.

Our environment plays a big part in not only our physical wellbeing but also our physiological, mental and spiritual wellbeing. The environment many people find themselves in is drastically different to that of our ancestors. Cities and towns are now common place. There is the hustle and bustle of working life. In order to sustain a life, many people find themselves working the majority of their lives with long hours, little time for friends, family, food preparation and relaxation the norm. In built up areas there is rarely peace and quiet. Many of us shop in multinational supermarkets with little consideration as to where our food actually comes from or some of the ingredients that we find in them. Even for those of us who are concerned, food labels do not tell you everything.

FRUIT and VEG

Let’s start with our fruit and vegetables. Five a day is what they say. However most of us do not take into account how this food is grown. Unless you eat only organic, one in three foods you buy contains traces of pesticides. According to Dr. Patrick Holford, from the Institute of Optimum Health – the amount of fruit and vegetables consumed by the average human being in a year has the equivalent of up to 4.5 litres, or one gallon, of pesticides sprayed on it. So going back to our diseases, many pesticides are known to be carcinogenic. They have also been linked to birth defects or decreased fertility and are also toxic to the brain and nervous system. Pesticide exposure is also associated with depression, memory decline, aggressive outbursts and Parkinson’s disease.

Even when labels do tell you what’s in the food, it’s still impossible to know if they are potentially dangerous and the affects that they may have on your body, without doing a lot of research. Many people naively buy products that contain chemicals trusting, that if it is allowed be put in our food, it must be safe. This is not the case. Many of the chemical additives that are found in our foods can cause adverse reactions. For example, the orange food colouring Tartrazine (or E102) can trigger hyperactivity and asthma in sensitive individuals, while the flavour enhancer monosodium glutamate (MSG or E621) has been linked to brain over-excitement. A reaction to MSG may cause burning sensations in the back, neck, chest; paralysis; numbness in the same areas; tingling or warmth in the face, arms or back; nausea; facial tightness; rapid heartbeat; chest pains, asthma attacks; drowsiness or cravings for other foods. I recently found E129 in orange juice, which is a food colourant made mostly from petroleum!

It is also not uncommon for food to be genetically engineered in this, our ‘peak of society’. These are foods that are typically grown from seeds that have been modified in a laboratory. This is to include a different genetic coding than that which would normally occur. This includes, but is not limited to, modifying fruit or vegetables so that they are resistant to certain pests and/or pesticides or so that they grow to a uniform size and/or colour. The initial predictions that GM crops would reduce the amount of pesticide used, have been proven to be unfounded. A 2008 report by Friends of The Earth found that pesticide use on GM crops has actually drastically increased – by upto 15 times on some crops. Also the promise of increased yields has also not transpired. There are great concerns that GM food could pose a serious risk to our health, with possible side effects including antibiotic resistance, the creation of new toxins and unexpected allergic reactions. Most of the health concerns remain largely speculative though, as no adequate safety tests have been done and no one is monitoring the impact of GM food on the countries eating the most of them. Far too little is known about DNA and genes to predict what the outcome of genetically modifying our food sources will be.

Ok, so our food isn’t clean, but surely our water is right? Well most of us in the Western World have running water coming into our homes. Compared to the Third World, we are privileged – many have to walk for miles, drinking filthy, mucky water. However, just because our water is transparent does not make it perfectly clean. Among the agents listed on page 192 of the report by the Department of Health and Children are Arsenic, Mercury, Chromium, Lead, Nickel, Silicon, Fluoride (Hydro Fluoro Silicic Acid – H2SiF6). Currently, 71% of the public water supplies in the Republic of Ireland contain these agents. In a letter from Dublin City Corporation they have openly stated that Sulphuric acid, aluminium sulphate, polyelectrolyte, hydroflousilicic acid and chlorine gas are added to our water.

Tap Water Additives according to Dublin Corporation

Let’s take a closer look at these ingredients the Government has deemed it necessary to add to our drinking water:

• Sulphuric acid is added to drinking water for pH correction, according to Dublin Corporation. Sulphuric acid is a corrosive and its main uses include lead-acid batteries for cars and other vehicles, ore processing, fertilizer manufacturing, oil refining, wastewater processing, and chemical synthesis.

• Aluminium sulphate and polyelectrolyte are added for removal of particulate matter. Aluminium sulphate in particular is commonly used in drinking water for purification. Aluminium, itself though is toxic! Toxicity can be traced to deposition in the bone and central nervous system. It competes with calcium for absorption.

• Hydrofluosilicic acid is added to the water for fluoridation, under the 1960 Health (Fluoridation of Water Supplies) Act. Hydrofluosilicic acid is classified as a hazardous waste, it is also unstable and corrosive. There has been a lot of controversy surrounding the fluoridation of water. Many other countries in Europe have rejected fluoride in their water. Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales have no fluoride in their water, England is only 10% fluoridated. Fluoride was originally thought to be good for your teeth but as the pictures below illustrate, over fluorosis of the teeth can have a detrimental effect on them. As well as damaging teeth, fluoride increases the risk of hip fractures, lowers children’s IQ’s, increases the risk of thyroid disorders, as well as being carcinogenic and has been proven to cause bone cancer in children as admitted by John Gormley on RTE’s Prime Time. I think it is also worth while noting at this point that the Nazis used fluoride in the water of the concentration camps in order to keep their prisoners docile and quiet, for which IG Farben was subject to the Nuremberg Trials as a result.

• Arsenic, mercury, lead, nickel, chlorine and silicon are also harmful when ingested by the human body. Mercury poisoning can result in several diseases, including acrodynia (pink disease), Hunter-Russell syndrome, and Minamata disease. Symptoms typically include sensory impairment (vision, hearing, speech), disturbed sensation and a lack of coordination. Lead interferes with a variety of body processes and is toxic to many organs and tissues including the heart, bones, intestines, kidneys, reproductive and nervous systems. It interferes with the development of the nervous system and is therefore particularly toxic to children, causing potentially permanent learning and behavioural disorders. Symptoms include abdominal pain, headache, anemia, irritability, and in severe cases seizures, coma, and death.

The food we eat and the water we drink are the basic building blocks of the body, and therefore our health. What we put in we get back out. As I mentioned earlier your food and water make up ever single molecule in your body as they are constantly renewing and repairing themselves. If you are replacing these with food and water that is not clean and does not contain the vital carbohydrates, proteins, fats, vitamins and minerals that are essential for the body, over time the quality at which your body functions will lessen and it is inevitable that you will become sick. Just like your machine malfunction if you put bad fuel in – although it may be small doses, over time all these additives and chemicals build up in your body, weakening your natural immunity and defences. The full effects of many substances added to food and water on the human body is still not known. If we just take the time to be more considerate of what we put into our mouths we can save ourselves and our bodies a lot of stress and disease in the long run. The illnesses that are rampant in our society today are a reflection of us, in the world, what we are eating and the ways in which we are living our lives.

The impact of the ways in which we live life effects not only us, but also our environment also. As discussed earlier most of us live in cities; mass concrete blocks where the natural area has been paved in order to make way for “progress”. We have all seen the devastation of this with the oil spills, the industrial waste that is dumped every year, the destruction of our natural resources. The effects are well documented on the environment. We rarely stop to consider how this also affects us. We breathe the air, drink the water and eat the food that comes from the soil. If this is not clean then our food will not be clean and healthy and thus we will not be getting good clean healthy food in order to fight off illness and disease.

It is a shame, that in this the 21st Century, the modern era, that traditional medicine is failing us and that we are now seeing the ideas that we were sold as “progress” is not all its cracked up to be. The pairing of traditional medicine with its mechanical view of the body and the pharmaceutical industry is a fatal cocktail for the body! The healthcare industry has in recent years more aptly been coined “disease care”, as its main concern is with treating and controlling the disease rather than curing and encouraging the individual to return to optimum health. One of the main issues with traditional medicine is that it treats the symptoms, not the root cause of the problem. Treating these symptoms is a billion dollar business – in the US non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs are a $30 billion industry – $17 billion for the drugs and $13 billion for treating the side effects.

Studies have also shown that by the age of sixty, nine in every ten people have arthritis. Once the level of pain is unbearable, sufferers are recommended steroidal or non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs. While both classes of drugs reduce the pain and swelling, they also speed up the progress of the disease. Many of the drugs prescribed by the pharmaceutical industry are synthetic versions of many naturally occurring chemicals and compounds. However these are not holistically balanced in the same way as in nature. If you read the label of most pharmaceutical drugs, you will often find a list of side effects (which should more appropriately be listed as effects) that are often worse than the initial illness you are taking the drug for! For example, on the inside of anti-depressant packs it often contains a warning saying that the prescribed drug may cause suicidal tendencies! Instead of being healthy human beings the pharmaceutical industry has turned the Western World into pill poppers. We'll just pop a pill to make something go away without taking the time to find out what is actually going on. According to surveys 46% of Americans take at least one prescribed medication daily – and don't think Ireland isn't too far behind.

Your Health is Your Wealth

Many people would see nothing wrong with going to the doctor to get an antibiotic during the colder seasons. While this antibiotic will generally have you feeling better within a week or so, its long term effects on the body should be considered when taking your health into account. An antibiotic replaces one of the functions of the body and subsequently suppresses the immune system. Antibiotics act by inhibiting certain enzymatic processes of bacteria, and by changing mineral balances. However, normal cells are also affected. This may be one reason why antibiotics weaken the immune response. Vitamin A and C and the use of simple herbs such as echinacea and astragalus, for example, are much safer and often equally effective. While many natural treatments take longer than their synthetic counterparts, they heal the body more completely rather than rushing the body to get back to work and keep up with our modern world.

If our health is our wealth and it is a billion euro industry would it not be logical to assume therefore that in the Western World, this would be reflected in the health care of our people? £333 million was spent between 2007 and 2008 by Cancer Research UK which has allowed them to become ranked one of the top three biomedical research organisations worldwide, yet one in three people get cancer in their lifetime. We have already seen that despite rising costs in health care, cutting edge technology and research, we also see money being spent to dump waste in our water, our air and our oceans and to grow genetically modified food in the environment we have created for them. At the same time, we see Europe pushing for a ban on natural herbs, vitamin and mineral supplements in order to fall into line with so-called trade standards under the name of Codex Alimentarius. It seems our health wealth has been badly invested and like the ‘debt bubble’ it is going to have to burst sometime.

For so long we have been taught that doctors are the experts and that they are the ones who know what’s wrong and that we should just listen to them. While doctors have studied for many years and gained much knowledge which should be respected and recognised, they don't know everything. Ever wonder why they call it practice? We can take back our own health and our own lives by learning how to take care of ourselves and our bodies. We can start by eating organic or locally grown food, growing our own food, eating more fresh vegetables, fruit, nuts and seeds, avoid GM foods, additives and flavourings, avoid tap water, drinking fresh spring water where ever you can, read about proper nutrition and hydration, learning and listening to your own body, avoid pharmaceutical drugs taking natural cures where possible and by finding a local holistic or nutritional therapist in your area that can help you learn how to heal yourself naturally.

Please note that this article is not a substitute for medical advice and anyone wishing to no longer take pharmaceutical medication should research thoroughly the implications and discuss it with your doctor.

Like A Bullet to the Head

■ Dr Sherri Tenpenny

It seems people often need to experience a bullet to the head before they will believe bullets can be deadly...and then they rue the day they ignored warnings about playing with loaded guns.

Vaccination seems to hold a similar place. People ignore words of caution and roll up their sleeves to get a flu shot. It seems they think getting a vaccine is the same as taking a multivitamin and equally as benign. But when serious adverse events occur, such as Guillain-Barre paralysis, a seizure disorder or even a death, a jolt of reality lays bare just how damaging a ‘simple vaccine’ can be.

The stranglehold of fear, perpetrated by those in white coats and by the medical bureaucrats in Washington DC who take their marching orders from Big Pharma, is working hard to choke rationally thinking adults into submission. I get emails almost every day that say something like, "I bought your DVDs and your books...but I have a question: Should I get a flu shot?" WHAT?@!>! My mouth drops. I have to clear my head and find a way to say, "No, you should not get the flu shot", being cautious to keep my tone void of sarcasm. That may seem harsh, but in very turbulent times soft language and hand holding until people ‘get it’ is becoming increasingly more difficult.

Being in the business of waking people up to the hazzards of vaccines certainly has its ups and downs. A recent ‘up’ was the public policy debate held on November 10 at the University of Texas in Austin. Sponsored by the Libertarian Longhorns, the Texas College Republicans and a few other Texas health freedom groups, the discussion called, "Are Vaccine Mandates Good or Bad for Public Health?" was open to the general public. Interest in this timely topic was reflected by the standing-room only attendance of the meeting.

Speaking in support of vaccination and school mandates was Tom Betz, MD, MPH, Director of Region 7 for the Texas Department of Health Services. Several of his health department colleagues joined him in the audience but chose not to join him on the stage. I had the pleasure of being teamed with Dawn Richardson, President and Co-founder of PROVE (Parents Requesting Open Vaccine Education) in Austin, Texas and the Directory of State Advocacy for the National Vaccine Information Center in Vienna, Virginia. Our presentation was mostly about opposition to vaccine mandates but we were able to address our opposition to vaccines in general. Based on the hundreds of comments we received, the debate (found all on YouTube) was well received and enlightening for all.

All three participants were given the questions to review prior to the debate. There is so much to say about vaccines that preparation was important to cover key points, almost as sound bites. Only three short minutes were allowed for each answer. Our very professional moderator, Dr. Donna Campbell, allowed equal time for each side.

During the personal introductions, Dr. Campbell informed the audience that the plan was to have two persons on each panel, but that Dr. Betz was the only person from the Health Department who would agree to participate. Prior to settling in on the stage, I had learned the reason why.

Shaking Dr. Betz’ hand, I thanked him for joining the discussion. He returned the niceties with a slight shrug, confessing that, “No one else wanted to do it.” Surprised, I queried, “Why not? This is a great way to tell everyone your message about vaccines.” My unspoken question was, “Why didn’t the Health Department want to jump on the opportunity to bury anti-vaccination ‘pseudo-science’, as you call it, once and for all, in front of everyone?” He quietly replied, “We’ve done these types of programs before; they never go well.”

It seems pro-vaccine arguments are being soundly defeated, time after time. And the real vaccine ‘pseudo-science’ is being exposed for the rhetoric it is: factoids crafted by public health officials from the WHO and the CDC and then regurgitated by under-informed medical professionals to a naive public. Funny how medical bureaucrats and doctors are considered the "experts" when it is strangely obvious they don't understand and probably don’t even read their own medical literature.

The Austin debate was the next important step in exposing that the ‘science of vaccination’ isn’t so scientific after all. Vaccination has been accepted as safe, effective and protective. The shots can be described as a medical sacred cow, defined as ‘a medical procedure that is unreasonably immune to criticism.’ Doctors and patients who question vaccines are ridiculed and marginalized. It is heresy to suggest that the status quo is wrong. Vaccine adverse events are considered ‘rare’, so when reactions occur, steps are taken to negate the association to the vaccine. Patients are discredited, parents are dismissed. Doctors subject very ill persons to thousands of dollars of inconclusive medical tests, rather than to simply acknowledge and rightfully assign causality to the vaccine. When a person reacts to penicillin or Paxil or any other drug, isn’t it just blamed on the drug. Not so with vaccines.

Going to Austin was an upbeat offset to other particularly disturbing news reported over the last few weeks about the H1N1, swine flu vaccine:

- Several schools have vaccinated children without parental consent.
- The growing list of reported miscarriages.
- A teen athlete who is now crippled.
- Two students and a teacher in China who died hours after getting the shot.
- Children having hallucinations and then committing suicide after taking Tamiflu.
- The strange and virulent outbreak in the Ukraine where the WHO has been deafeningly silent about its findings but knows that, whatever is the cause, vaccination is the answer.

We seem to regard germs the same way we think about terrorism: Random attacks that can be deadly. All parties who promote vaccination hawk this view, particularly those pushing both types of flu shots. Tens of millions have been spent in the US on national advertising campaigns and even Sesame Street merchandising to convince us that flu shots are necessary to keep us well and keep us alive. But perhaps we have it backwards. Bugs can cause random, mostly benign attacks, particularly among the healthy. But random, ‘deadly’ attacks, with health consequences that can show up years later. I’d worry more about the vaccines.

After 200 years, with our many advances in science and medicine, you would think that someone could develop a method to protect babies and adults from infectious disease other than injecting them with animal cells, stray viruses, heavy metals and toxic chemicals. Why do we call this health and protection? Until my dying breath I will never understand why people resolutely defend and demand the right to inject themselves and their children with these risky potions.

For those who meet resistance when trying to warn family and friends of vaccine risks, the only thing to do really, is to keep spreading the word. Don’t be discouraged. You never know who is listening and you never know when the seeds will sprout. Focus on those who are waking up and gratefully support them. The rest, well sadly, they may have to find out the hard way what it feels like to get hit by that stray bullet.

The following letter which was posted to Mary Harney under registered post is printed here as an open letter.

Dear Minister for Health Mary Harney,

I believe that Professor Bill Hall as Director of the National Virus Reference Laboratory is the most eminent authority in Ireland on pathogenic viruses.

Over the last few years I have repeatedly requested you the Minister for Health Mary Harney to compel the relevant Irish scientific experts such as Professor Bill Hall to provide the scientific evidence for the existence of the H1N1 virus. Your private secretary Darragh Scully replied to me in 2009 that the Minister for Health relies on the expert opinion of the Expert Advisory Group at the Department of Health and also on the WHO. I believe that Professor Bill Hall is on this Expert Advisory Group along with Dr Darina O’Flanagan Director of the HPSC.

This defence used by you as Minister for Health is the "appalling vista" defence, in that it would be such an appalling vista that the experts such as Professor Bill Hall and the WHO officials are wrong, that they must therefore be right. This reasoning is faulty. As Lord Nimmo Smith said in a famous judgment:-

But however often a conclusion may be repeated, it is only as sound as the research on which it is based, and of this I have seen none.

I want Professor Bill Hall to provide me with one scientific publication proving the existence of the H1N1 virus. This scientific paper must demonstrate how the H1N1 virus was isolated, biochemically characterised and photographed.

Dr Stefan Lanka has produced three papers concerning a virus he isolated called the Ectocarpus siliculosus virus. This virus is not pathogenic and neither are the millions of viruses that exist in just one litre of sea-water!

The Ectocarpus siliculosus virus has a diameter of approximately 120nm. Dr Lanka assures me that the diameters of all alleged pathogenic viruses vary from 60 nm to 180nm.

The National Virus Reference Laboratory (NVRL) relies on indirect evidence which seems to prove the existence of the H1N1 virus. However the NVRL cannot directly prove the existence of the H1N1 virus by isolating the virus from the host cell.

I have four questions for Professor Bill Hall that I want you to compel him to answer:-

- 1) Does Professor Bill Hall accept that the Ectocarpus siliculosus virus of approximately 120nm diameter has been isolated, biochemically characterised and photographed by Dr Stefan Lanka?
- 2) What is the approximate diameter of the H1N1 virus?
- 3) Why can Professor Bill Hall not cite a scientific publication proving the existence of the H1N1 virus?
- 4) Why can Professor Bill Hall and his NVRL colleagues not isolate the H1N1 virus in a similar manner like the Ectocarpus siliculosus virus and have this published in a scientific journal?

I accept that the received wisdom is that H1N1 exists and is pathogenic. But when your relevant experts cannot isolate the H1N1 virus (even though this is technologically possible) you have to ask yourself why not?

Please compel Professor Bill Hall to give the diameter of the alleged H1N1 virus and bear in mind that the virus Dr Lanka isolated has a diameter of approximately 120nm. Why can the NVRL not isolate the similar sized H1N1 virus?

I accept that as Minister of Health you are not an expert on viruses. All I am asking is that you compel the relevant Irish expert Professor Bill Hall to answer my four questions.

Yours Sincerely

James McCumiskey

New Kremlin Power Struggle between Putin and Medvedev

■ F. William Engdahl

Evidence is emerging from behind Kremlin walls that there is an intense power battle underway between Russian President Medvedev and his predecessor, Prime Minister Vladimir Putin. The outcome could have significant geopolitical consequences for Europe and for the world. Here are some elements we have pieced together in recent weeks.

In recent weeks Russian foreign policy decisions made by the President have then been reversed by his Prime Minister. One was the agreement announced between French President Sarkozy and Medvedev that Russia would buy French Mistral boats, boats which are not at all relevant to Russian Navy needs. Putin managed to overturn the deal by announcing that a system of competitive bids would be instigated for the purchase. Apparently he, as former head of Russian Foreign Intelligence, FSB, was given information of bribery payments by Sarkozy to Medvedev. The rival bidder would likely be won by OSK, a conglomerate chaired by Igor Sechin, Vladimir Putin's deputy.

The second major policy split was over delivery of S300 missiles to Iran. The UN Security Council adopted Resolution 1929, new sanctions against Iran over its alleged nuclear weapons program; which Medvedev claimed banned such sale: Medvedev in a departure from previous Russian support for Teheran against the US and Israel, had come out for a most strict embargo against Teheran. Putin by contrast claimed the UN Resolution did not apply to S300 deliveries as those had been agreed prior to the resolution. Then days later, contradicting Medvedev, Defense Minister Anatoli Serdioukov declared that regarding delivery of the S300 missiles, "that no decision had been made."

Yet another major split on vital Russian foreign policy recently took place over the stalled Russian-built nuclear power reactor at Bushehr in Iran. The USA, Canada and the EU had put enormous pressure on Moscow to block startup of the civilian reactor despite the fact it violated no international non-proliferation treaty. President Medvedev had aligned with the Atlanticist position to apply the embargo to all energy, while Putin openly supported Iran's desire to achieve energy independence. Foreign Affairs Minister Sergey Lavrov made a statement calling startup of the power plant as an act of confidence on the part of Iran vis-à-vis the international community, Putin's position. The plant is being completed under strict IAEA supervision and Russian controls. On August 20-22, the first fuel was transferred into the reactor. Bushehr is unique in terms of strict adherence to the nuclear nonproliferation regime. During the entire period of operation of the plant, fuel for it will be delivered by Russia on the conditions of its subsequent return. Furthermore, the entire process of operation of the station, as well as supply and return of fuel will be under full IAEA supervision. This eliminates the possibility of any manipulation of spent nuclear fuel. The implications of the Medvedev attempt to stop the Bushehr project in favour of the US position in such circumstances were stark. The coming Presidential elections

The power struggle between two men who had been allied for over three decades is of enormous significance in face of coming Russian Presidential elections. To weigh Russian politics through German or Western eyes is a mistake. The cultural tradition and history are far different. In Russia a strong man in the Kremlin is the tradition. The issue here is not so much democracy or lack of it, but rather what grand strategy the two rivals bring for Russia and to the rest of the world.

In a recent speech before foreign academics and journalists in Sochi on the Black Sea Putin hinted he is planning to run in the coming elections for the Presidency, something until now he has avoided commenting on. When asked whether his potential re-election to the presidency would jeopardise Russia's political system, Putin likened himself to FDR, the United States' longest-serving president. "In his day, US President (Franklin) Roosevelt was re-elected four times in a row because this did not contradict the American Constitution. Neither I nor President (Dmitry) Medvedev will do anything that contradicts existing Russian legislation and the country's basic law," he said. Under the Russian Constitution, in this respect modelled on the US, a President may serve only two CONSECUTIVE terms. That leaves a loophole if a President steps down for one term and then is reelected after which Putin now would be eligible to do.

Although the 57-year old Putin refused to confirm whether he would definitely run in 2012, he hinted strongly, "It interests me as much as ... I was going to say 'as much as anyone', but really more than everyone else!" Putin occupied the presidency from 2000-2008 and then gave the job to Dmitry Medvedev, a hand-picked loyalist, due to the constitutional limit on serving a third consecutive term. Now Putin is eligible to return to the presidency in 2012 and to serve a further two consecutive terms if he chooses. The terms have since been extended from four to six years, meaning he could stay in power until 2024 at which point he would be 72.

Global Warming in the National Interest! Another Sickly Green Lie!

■ Neil Foster

So those sickly shady folks in the Green Party intend to stay until the 'Finance Bill' is passed because it's in the national interest do they?

I wonder whose national interest it's in because surely a bill which is set to plunge the Irish nation into abject poverty for generations of Irish citizens isn't in the Irish nation's or the Irish people's interest!

No, these parasites just want to cling onto power for as long as it takes to get their bogus manmade 'global warming' bill passed following the coldest winter in a century. I use the words 'global warming' because this was the first term used to sell the biggest scientific fraud in the history of mankind to a gullible and intellectually ignorant general public who feast on nothing more than sport and handbags sold to them by the mainstream whore media. 'Global warming' was the original lie sold to the world and it matters not a jot what they want to call it now; 'a climate change bill', 'an atmosphere depletion bill' or 'a oh my God, isn't it warm in the middle of August' bill.

This is the goal and the sole purpose of these ecofascists being in power today. They care nothing for the Irish people or the people of the world in general. They are ANTI-HUMAN! They want to wipe humanity off the face of the earth to leave more room for themselves. Unfortunately for them, they don't even realise that their fanaticism and ludicrous devotion to the green gods in the banking world is another falacy being sold to them because the multi-billionaire masters of the universe don't need them in the world either. They and their children and grandchildren are going to be sacrificed on the altar of Gaia worshipping eugenicist psychopathic banking brotherhood the same as everyone else whom the world's elite decide are nothing more than 'useless eaters'.

If there are any of you greenie supporters reading this and still believe that CO2, the life gas of the planet, is causing global warming, then you've been smoking a bit too much of that green, green grass or injecting some of that powdery stuff being imported by the military from Afghanistan. If so be careful of that wicked thing called flatulence... The party may have to tax you on that!

Keeping an Eye on the News: Lies, Damned Lies and Dictatorships.

I saw a number of articles in the press this weekend which highlighted the true agenda of Cameron's LibCon coalition. Perhaps I was particularly alert following our exposure of top Tory Francis Maude MP working in direct partnership with top NuLabour socialist Julia Middleton. Just ask yourself the question.....why would the Tories be working with a John Prescott nee Blairite political charity?

If we join up the dots of these media snippets we can see further into the mists of the Cameron - Clegg partnership and where they are heading. In the Daily Mail 24th October Maude is quoted as suggesting that: "Liberal Democrat leader Nick Clegg will remain Deputy Prime Minister even if the Conservatives win outright victory at the next Election." The Mail goes on to say that: "Mr Maude is one of Mr Cameron's closest advisers. His comments will fuel suspicion among Right-wing Conservatives that the Prime Minister sees the Coalition as part of a long-term strategy, not a short-term fix after the Election result."

Of course Mr Maude is working on a long term strategy. The aim of the coalition is to destroy the Lib Dems, thereby creating a two party political system. The next step will be to drive politics in the UK towards a single party elitist dictatorship by further integration of (ex) Labour politicians into the coalition. Within this overall programme, Common Purpose is the tool by which individuals in politics and the Civil Service /

Public Sector will be mentally 'reframed' to change their values and behaviour to the common [political] purpose or common line.

The Mail also went on to suggest that: "David Cameron and Nick Clegg plan to flood the Lords with another 44 new Coalition peers to stop Labour sabotaging their policies in the Upper House." Whilst we should be wary with the 'truth' in a paper like the Daily Mail, I am sure what they say is correct. Cameron and Clegg are creating a dictatorship and they need to control what remains of the Lords to ensure all policies can be forced through any opposition. As a spokesman says: "Lords votes can be sprung at a moment's notice so we need plenty of new peers on our side to make sure we can get our legislative programme through safely."

Trampling over our rights and the British Constitution, Cameron and Clegg treat the House of Lords as if it was their private 'club'. These men are dangerous elitists, and they continue to commit Treason for their International Bankster masters in driving us into the EU Supranational dictatorship. As their plan advances however their true colours become ever more apparent. Aside from Maude, watch Vince Cable and next step policy towards the (one) World Government. You have been warned.

From NAFTA to CETA: Canada-EU Deep Economic Integration

■ Dana Gabriel

Canada and the European Union (EU) have already held five rounds of negotiations towards a Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement (CETA) which will go beyond NAFTA. With the sixth round of talks scheduled to take place in Brussels, Belgium from January 17-21, Canadian and EU officials remain optimistic that a deal could be finalized by the end of 2011. Thus far, negotiations have included key areas such as goods, rules of origin, services, investment, government procurement, as well as others. As talks enter their final crucial stages, there are growing concerns over the threat CETA poses to Canadian sovereignty. Coupled with the financial turmoil sweeping Europe, deep economic integration with the EU could prove disastrous.

In a recent article Maude Barlow, national chair of the Council of Canadians, points out the dangers Canada faces with the current CETA trade model. She warns that, "CETA will open up the rules, standards and public spending priorities of provinces and municipalities to direct competition and challenge from European corporations." Barlow goes on to say, "Europe is seeking a comprehensive and aggressive global approach to acquiring the raw materials needed by its corporations. At its heart, this deal is a bid for unprecedented and uncontrolled European access to Canadian resources." She also added, "CETA will likely have a NAFTA-type investor-state enforcement mechanism, which means that European corporations will have the same right that U.S. companies now enjoy to sue the Canadian government if it introduces new rules to protect the environment." If CETA includes something similar to NAFTA's Chapter 11 which gives corporations the power to challenge laws and regulations that restrict their profits, U.S. and Mexican companies could benefit from any rulings that favour the EU. Ultimately, like NAFTA and other trade deals, CETA will further serve corporate interests.

A report released in December of last year, entitled Public Water for Sale: How Canada will privatize our public water systems, "exposes how CETA would open up public municipal water systems across Canada to privatization." The paper prepared by the the Council of Canadians and the Canadian Union of Public Employees cautions that, "public water in Canada will be lost unless the provinces and territories take immediate steps to remove water from the scope of the proposed Canada-EU Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement." The Union of B.C. Municipalities supports a resolution by those cities and towns who wish to receive a clear, permanent exemption from CETA. Others have voiced opposition to any deal that could deny government the ability to favour local businesses and create jobs. There has been increased pressure on Ottawa to either fully or partly shield the municipal sector from government procurement of goods and services. Giving the EU full access to sub-national purchasing and contracting in Canada would open up areas such as school boards, universities, hospitals, as well as other provincial agencies.

The October 2010 report, Out of Equilibrium: The Impact of EU-Canada Free Trade on the Real Economy written by economist Jim Stanford warns that Canada's bilateral trade deficit with the EU could grow under CETA. Released by the Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives, the paper, "models three scenarios to provide a range of estimates regarding the likely impacts of EU-Canada free trade. In every case, Canada's bilateral trade balance worsens significantly. The simulations suggest an incremental loss of between 28,000 and 150,000 Canadian jobs." Many of these could be good jobs in sectors such as machinery, chemicals, electronic, food-processing, apparel-making and the auto industry. The study on the economic impacts of CETA also, "estimates direct losses in Canadian GDP between 0.56% and almost 3%, experienced over several years of adjustment to the new trade pact. Indirect losses of spin-off production, employment, and investment could add significantly to those economic losses." Stanford concluded, "Free trade with Europe will take a bad situation for Canada, marked by large deficits and lost jobs, and make it much worse."

It is becoming apparent that Canadian sacrifices in regards to a free trade agreement with the EU outweighs any potential benefits. While Canada does need to lessen its dependency on the U.S. economy, CETA is based on the failed NAFTA trade model and will only serve to accelerate the corporate takeover of the country. The sixth round of negotiations are expected to focus on sensitive areas such as tariffs on dairy imports, intellectual property rights investment and regulatory standardization, as well as public procurement. CETA is part of a larger agenda and could be used as a blueprint for a future US-EU trade agreement and a stepping-stone to a NAFTA-EU free trade zone.

At the EU-U.S. Summit held in Lisbon several months back, leaders reaffirmed their close partnership, as well as their desire to bring greater prosperity and security to both sides of the Atlantic. They recognised the central role of the Transatlantic Economic Council (TEC) and entrusted, "the TEC to develop a transatlantic agenda to stimulate growth and create jobs in key emerging sectors and technologies." The TEC was called upon to, "identify ways to improve transatlantic consultation before regulators and agencies develop regulation in economically promising new technologies and sectors, to share best practices, and to develop joint principles with the aim of promoting maximum compatibility of regulations and the freest possible transatlantic flow of ideas, products, and services." The TEC was established in 2007 in an effort to work towards increasing investment, eliminating trade barriers and streamlining harmonization on regulations. It is the framework for advancing transatlantic economic integration between the U.S. and the EU.

In December of last year, the TEC met in Washington where "European Commissioners and leading US government representatives took the first concrete steps to ensure the TEC process creates a forward-looking business environment that reduces regulatory barriers and encourages innovation, shared standards and high-tech business." An agreement on a common approach to electronic health record systems and a declaration on energy efficiency was also signed. The TEC meeting identified other, "key areas for joint activities in the innovation sector and discussed ways to ensure secure trade and strengthen the customs cooperation between the two partners." The TEC has been compared to the Security and Prosperity Partnership (SPP). Along with NAFTA, the SPP agenda which continues to move forward through other initiatives, is essentially laying the foundation for a North American Union. A Canada-EU trade deal would be an incremental step towards a Free Trade Area of the Atlantic and an eventual Transatlantic Union.

Canada has fared better than other countries during the current financial crisis. With parts of Europe still marred in recession and debt trouble, a trade agreement with the EU, especially under the template in which it is being negotiated could prove costly. Failed monetary policies and government managed free trade agreements that favour corporate interests, deserve their share of the blame for the current global economic predicament. Yet, we are still being told that more globalization is the solution to our financial woes. In order to further restructure the world, the ruling elite seek to capitalize on the economic chaos which in many ways they engineered.

Gardaí No Longer Guardians Of The Peace?

When our police force was set up in 1923 the name "Garda Síochána" meant "Guardians of the Peace". But today, the Gardaí are getting further and further away from that role and are now becoming "Law Enforcement Officers".

There is a huge difference in the two functions. A Peace Officer is just that; he keeps the peace in society and protects each and every individual's rights. On the other hand, a Law Enforcement Officer is a revenue collector whose job is to gather money for the now corporatized law courts and other 'legal fictions' of government.

These two roles are not in accord. It is time to force our government to return The Gardaí to their true and original function.

Whistleblower reveals CIA ties to illegal wiretapping in Georgia

■ Patrick Downey

Patrick: Downey, a US citizen denied political asylum in Ireland, this week released the identity of a senior CIA operative involved in illegal eavesdropping activities on the Georgian opposition party in Tbilisi 2007 – 2008.

In 2009, Downey, a US citizen, disabled veteran, former US Foreign Service employee, brought a civil rights lawsuit against the United States ("Patrick C. Downey Jr. -v- The United States"), arguing that his rights to due process and equal protection, as guaranteed in the 14th Amendment to the US Constitution were being denied to him and that he was thus being discriminated against on the basis of his nationality — having no similar form of redress as that given to foreign citizens. Several days after filing the case, Downey was ruled against for reasons which were completely bogus in nature, and his request for a jury trial was also denied. The case is currently being appealed. Moreover, Downey's former employer in the Republic of Georgia, a Yeltsin-era Russian oligarch and multi-billionaire by the name of Boris Ivanishvili (who was named in the lawsuit), benefited personally from tens of millions of Euros in "war reconstruction loans", courtesy of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD); a large portion of which happens to be owned by the US government. These loans occurred in the wake of the 2008 War in South Ossetia, which it has been suggested was started by then-US Vice President/Vietnam War draft-dodger Dick Cheney. Downey himself chose to be evacuated during the War in South Ossetia (for the cost of $35.00), which the US Department of State later billed him for.

Later in 2009, Downey was threatened by a representative of Mr. Ivanishvili's in Tbilisi and later fled from the US in order to claim political asylum in Ireland, given the threats made against him and the United State's government's refusal to respond to Mr. Downey's repeated concerns regarding the threats, which he attributed to political reasons.

While in seeking asylum in Ireland under "Direct Provision", in addition to being assaulted, Downey's human rights were repeatedly violated for a period of several months, which has caused Downey a considerable degree of pain and suffering. During this time, Mr. Downey became aware of illegal and clandestine activities which had occurred in Georgia, including illegal wiretapping and electronic surveillance of Georgian citizens opposed to the policies of Georgian President Mikheil Saakashvili, whom the US installed as president of Georgia in an illegal regime-change operation carried out by former US Ambassador to Georgia, Richard Miles (as well as others), which was in part funded by groups linked to billionaire financier George Soros' "Soros Foundation". It has in fact been suggested that other billionaires took part in this fiasco.

Downey was denied political asylum in Ireland and issued a deportation notice. Downey (who is currently in hiding), fears for his life, yet he has chosen to fight all the injustice which he has been forced to endure, for private, as well as patriotic reasons.

View Patrick's video statement on www.WeAreChange.ie/whistleblower

"We hold these truths to be self evident, that all men are created equally, that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these rights are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. To secure these rights Governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the Governed; that when any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it".

These words contain fundamental truths so powerful that they still stir something in the hearts and minds of men and, these words may be more relevant today than the day they were first penned. Avoiding a debate regarding who or what a creator is, we can hopefully agree that we all came into existence through some miracle of nature. We are all living sentient beings with ambition to explore and understand this creation and ourselves in it. We are endowed equally with the right to life, property and the freedom to pursue our ambitions. However in an effort to maximise and secure these rights, groups of people join together by their mutual consent and create a 'system', agreeing to abide by a set of guidelines. These guidelines are not to be introduced arbitrarily, but rather for mans own benefit. Please, excuse this elementary explanation for something that is fairly obvious but the point is raised to highlight the contrast:

If the purpose of Government is to secure the rights of man and maximise their freedoms; what does it mean when a Government creates rules allowing Banks to seize the property of the men and women whom the laws are supposed to protect? What does it mean when a Government legislates for the lawful plunder of our nations resources and land? Has the Government of Ireland become destructive of its ends?

Surely this is repugnant to the very notions of justice, freedom and law, (the cornerstones of any truly free society), thus rendering the Government redundant. It has outgrown its use, failed in its endeavours, and it's time we learned our lessons and moved on. It is we the people that created this monster; or, at the very least are responsible for it by our omission to stop it. While it was once a right to alter or abolish it, it has now become a duty to do so if we are to ensure that freedom and prosperity exists for future generations.

But, what form of Governance can replace what we have? A quick scan through history will show us that everything we've tried so far falls short; while the old familiar 'left/right' political circus rolls on ad nauseum never really going anywhere. We seem to be waiting for the right bunch of suits to come along with the right bunch of answers to all of our problems. Another system for us to divest our power into, placing our equals on pedestals high above ourselves, giving them power to determine how we best live our lives?

Madness is often defined as doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results. An ideal Government full of honest, dedicated, un-ambitious and genuine people who have nothing more than the public's best interest at heart is never realistically going to happen! Too much power is given over to too few people who are no more than you or I. The common denominator of these various 'systems' is that the people invariably give their power over to another group or individual. The EU is nothing more than a top-down system of control, channelling the decision making power further and further away from the common people.

The time has come for man to stand up and be counted, the time has come for we the people to become Self-Governed; Sovereign men and women. To re-establish, in ourselves the power that we once (theoretically) invested in the State and take full responsibility for making this world a better place; starting with ourselves, then our homes, then our communities then our nations. We the people need to lift this country off its knees – so "let us rise" – James Larkin

YOU ARE SOVEREIGN!

The word 'Sovereignty' means to be the supreme, independent authority and is often confused with the notions of Royalty and Pageantry. However, while Kings and Queens are 'Sovereign' the concept has a much broader reach than that. The word is often used to describe a Nations autonomy and has recently become a common buzz-word on today's media as they try to convince us; the sovereign inhabitants, that the National Debt; brought about by greedy bankers, corrupt contractors and a Government full of 'usefull idiots' is somehow a "Sovereign Debt" – this very phrase is a contradiction of terms.

An Introduction to Sovereignty

By Kevin: Ó 'Flannagáin

It is We the People who are Sovereign; this is the truth of the matter. You are the sovereign supreme authority over your own self, your own bodily kingdom. If you can claim ownership of nothing else, you can claim ownership of yourself. But when we invest our supreme authority into another entity, whether knowingly or unknowingly, we give that entity power to govern (i.e. control) us; we give up the right to decide for ourselves and agree to be bound by the decisions of our new master who we hope will act in our best interest. In so doing we neglect the fact that we are all self-determined, autonomous beings with hopes, ambitions and the means of attaining them. We are born free and we will die free – however we can only live free if we make that choice.

"Liberty will not descend to a people; a people must raise themselves to liberty; it is a blessing that must be earned before it can be enjoyed." ~ Charles Caleb Colton.

The thing to remember is that you are Sovereign right now as you read this! The first step in enjoying your sovereignty, however, lies in knowing who you are and realising that you hold the power to create change, it lies in making the decision to take full responsibility for your life experience, it lies in recognising your fellow man as your equal and having the desire to protect their rights as much as your own. But, it's also about learning to see through the illusion of control that we have been brought up with and realising that our rights are inalienable, invincible and higher than any human statute.

We are just born into this system so we do not consider that it can be any other way. We are conditioned to believe that the highest authority in the land is actually the State and with good reason: the State creates a new 'rule' stating you must or must not do a certain thing and attaches a monetary penalty for any 'PERSONS' who commit an offence under the 'Act'. They then employ policy enforcers who are empowered to use force against you, remove you from your home and bring you to a 'Court' where you will be 'judged', have a fine imposed, face imprisonment, or both. Similarly you have a Banking system, rescued from bust by the State on the back of the tax-payer and empowered to seize your home and property if you fail to make extortionate payments on what was essentially a fraudulent contract to begin with (we're not told our signature creates the credit); they will also employ force to do so.

If the people truly are the highest power on the land, how and why do the Government and the Banks have the Right to evict people from their homes, seize their land and property, impose levies and taxes on our hard earned wages and legislate arbitrarily concerned more with extracting revenue than establishing real justice on the land? If my rights are invincible and higher than any human statute how can non-living entities use force to exert their power over me, yet, still be in the right in the eyes of the law? What legal wizardry is being performed right before our very eyes, hidden so plainly that we cannot see it? When we learn to see the mechanisms of our bondage, we begin to see that these chains were not as strong as we once believed.

STRUCTURE OF AUTHORITY

A brief look at the true chain of authority demonstrates how the government essentially swaps rolls from 'Servant' to 'Master'. The legal maxim states: "a thing cannot have greater power than that from which the power was derived"; government, being a creation of the people, derives all its power directly from us. Therefore, in order for the Government to obtain authority over the people they needed to create something that would be subject to them and the rules they create.

The Governments use the authority vested in them to enact the rules of a society. Acts and statutes, being man-made, are lower than the Natural Law and not binding on natural flesh and blood men/women (unless by their consent). In order for the government to obtain authority over you they needed to create a legal entity (or ens legis) known in Law as a 'Person' and attach or 'bond' this to you the living being.

This is created via the birth certificate and can be identified by your name usually appearing in ALL CAPS (but not always) on any official documents or ID's. The Government deceptively neglects to provide us with full disclosure of the 'social agreement' and we assume that this 'Straw Man' or 'Person' is us! This 'Person' in legal terminology is a corporation/commercial entity/legal fiction with no inherent fundamental Rights. Instead it has privileges and duties granted by the master.

This deception effectively allows the Government to switch roles and become 'Master'; to make matters worse we are not informed that we are pledged as collateral to secure more interest bearing, Fiat, debt based currency into circulation! We are considered nothing more than 'Human Resources', here to buy, sell, use money and make payments towards the national debt via taxation. We are viewed as 'valuable commodities'.

The important thing to understand is that you are not a 'Person'! You HAVE a 'Person'; you USE a 'Person'. This Person or 'Straw man' requires You, the (flesh and blood) Man, to give it life by accepting it as 'Personal' identification, and, as such accept any liability attached. Therefore the State or Government can only lawfully and justly apply legislation to this 'Person' when you have consented and accepted liability on its behalf. Though our ignorance of their words, terms and form they manage to establish 'legal' authority over us.

SILENCE GIVES CONSENT

Another maxim of law states: "Silence gives consent", and this is how it's done. The Dáil create a piece of paper and call it a 'Bill'. This piece of paper has words on it; just words, saying that e.g. "Any PERSONS operating vehicles driving in excess of 20mph in Dublin City Centre will be fined 50Euro". This is OFFERED to the Séanad for their approval (an offer to contract) – the Séanad make amendments and send it back to the Dáil within e.g. 10 days (a counter-offer). This goes on back and forward, making adjustments until one of them do not send it back within the time limit. When this occurs their 'silence' or 'non-response' is considered to be an 'acceptance/agreement', 'meeting of the minds', and it passes as an ACT. That's exactly what it is - ACTing as Law. By announcing the Act to the public they are effectively giving us notice and making an offer to contract.

When we remain silent we give the government the legal right to ASSUME that we have all consented. By remaining silent we accept the offer made by the 'GOV.INC' that if we do the thing mentioned in the statute we are liable for charges - this is the agreement.

NOTICE OF UNDERSTANDING AND INTENT

This relationship is easily changed by creating your own Notice's outlining an understanding of your rights, how the law truly effects you, how legislation and acts do not apply to sovereign men and women and how you intend to live peacefully and free from external control or intrusion. We are entitled to send these to the relevant officials providing them ample time to respond and rebut the points raised in our Notice. When they remain silent and fail to provide lawful excuse we establish a new binding and enforceable contract which protects and entrenches our rights.

Contracts between men/women establish the Law - You break the law when you dishonour your contracts. The contracts/agreements we make with the men and women in government (or otherwise) are more powerful then the COMMERCIAL contracts/STATUTES they enforce on us as "THE GOVERNMENT OF IRELAND (INC)".

THE POWER OF WORDS

Every day the power of words are being used by Banks and debt collectors to intimidate good honest people into submission. Words hold power and when we understand a words true meaning we can wield that power for ourselves. Words and language are the tools of the trade for the legal profession and in most cases it is merely the power of words being used against us that intimidates us into handing our rights away.

Lawyers and judges share no aversion to long words, complicated phrases and legal 'jargon' which leaves the common observer, or 'lay-man' (as they like to refer to us as), in the dark and confused. They present law in such a way that leaves one with the impression that it is a very complicated subject requiring years of study but seldom ever consider why this would be so? We are supposed to know the law inherently; ignorance of it is no excuse.

An Introduction to Sovereignty

LEGALESE

However, part of the deception lies in the very language being used. This language is known as 'legalese' and a study of some of these meanings can be quite eye opening. For example to 'Apply' colloquially means 'to beg', and 'Submit' is more blatant. When we go to Court we accept a 'benefit' and in doing so we waive certain rights and agree to be bound to any judgement made. Your consent needs to be obtained in order for these proceedings to be lawful. There are a number of ways your consent is deceptively obtained, an obvious one concerns the question: "do you understand the charges?". We are to assume this means do you 'comprehend' what has been said? However, we are being asked do you 'stand-under' the charges and accept all liability attached.

LAWFUL vs LEGAL

There is a BIG difference between 'Lawful' and 'Legal' and what's being enforced on you is not 'Law' in the true sense it's 'legislation'. If you have caused no harm to anyone and if there is no victim then you have NOT BROKEN THE LAW! - You only breach the 'commercial contract'/legislation as the government assume your consent.

They use 'legal' powers against us, but if we use Law and the knowledge of our rights we can peacefully become more powerful. Our ancestors knew this and it explains why the invaders required the brutal penal laws to stamp out our ancient legal tradition known today as 'Brehon Law'; a system of jurisprudence which we loved and voluntarily upheld as a duty.

Most people think that because we vote for the government we are forced to accept the rules - but that is not so. If that were the case we would not be a free sovereign people and would be evidence of tyranny. We created this idea of government to protect our rights to life, liberty and happiness - the government has long since breached its contract with the people. With every passing day it is becoming more and more apparent that a great worldwide change is now inevitable. While many people are actively seeking alternative solutions to old problems, many of us remain in a state of denial, quietly watching and waiting to see what 'solutions' the men in suits will offer, hoping that one day soon all our current socio-political-economic problems will be resolved and we will return to how it was during the boom times.

The course of our future, the march of our nation is not set in stone. It is we who must determine whether or not we will acquiesce to the demands of the EU, IMF, Bankers and Corrupt politicians who are leading our people towards economic slavery, eroding our National Sovereignty and ignoring our Rights.

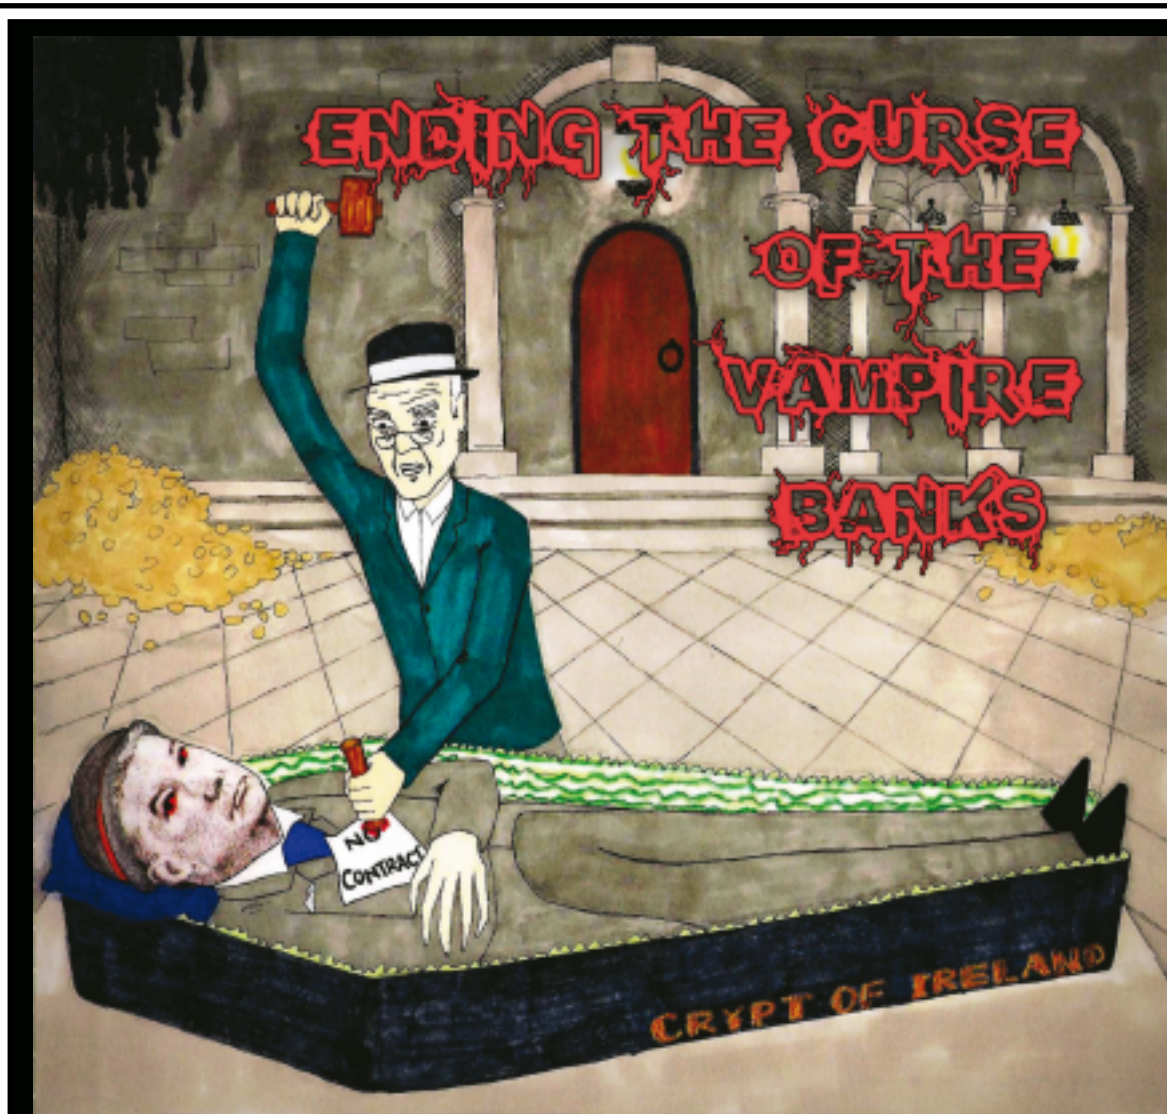

We the people have a great opportunity now to take responsibility for our own destiny, to stand up for truth, justice, fairness and equality and to form a nation of sovereign independent free men and women. It is our duty to alter, abolish and set-right this current system of governance.

The path to freedom may not be an easy one; at first, but we have more tools now than ever before. People all over the nation and the world are being re-awakened to the inherent knowledge of their sovereignty and are beginning to take the power back. Will you be part of it?

"Cowardice asks the question, 'Is it safe?' Expediency asks the question, 'Is it politic?' Vanity asks the question, 'Is it popular?' But, conscience asks the question, 'Is it right?' And there comes a time when one must take a position that is neither safe, nor politic, nor popular, but one must take it because one's conscience tells one that it is right." - Dr Martin Luther King Jr

Bunreacht na hÉireann - lost in Translation?

■ Kevin: Ó 'Flannagáin

Expert in the Irish language, Micheál Ó'Cearúil's: "Bunreacht na hÉireann: A Study of the Irish Text"; produced on behalf of the All Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution with foreword by Brian Lenihan T.D and then chairman of the Committee, sets out to remedy perceived deviations between the Irish text of the Constitution and English translations in common usage. The importance of this study cannot be stressed enough. Page 1 of the Introduction admits that "almost every section of the Constitution contains divergences of some degree between the two texts", this is worrying to say the least and surely this should merit a correction in the translations.

Bunreacht na hÉireann is binding upon all organs and agents of the State, it limits the scope of government power, facilitates a system of 'checks and balances', and lists rights guaranteed to the citizens. It is essential for a free people to be fully and openly informed regarding the contents of a Constitution, divergences or deviations of any kind should be viewed with scrutiny.

Consider the following examples:

Article 40.3.1 of the Literal English translation

the "State guarantees not to interfere by its laws with the personal rights of any citizen, and...to defend and assert those rights with its laws in so far as it is possible". Whereas in the common English translation the State only guarantees to "respect, and, as far as practicable, by its laws defend and vindicate the personal rights of the citizen."

There is quite a big difference between asserting "those rights as far possible" and having "respect" for them "as far as it is practicable". Some might say that this is an appeal to semantics but the constitution is suppose to written in plain understandable language, why deviate from the literal translation at all if it makes more sense?

More blatant are the deviations as can be seen in Article 41.1.1. Literally translated from Irish it acknowledges the Family as a "moral institution which has inalienable inviolable rights which are more ancient and higher than any human statute". Whereas the translation in modern usage also recognises the family as a moral institution, however they are "possessed" with "inalienable and imprescriptible rights, antecedent and superior to all positive law." The latter is unnecessarily overcomplicated and cloaks the reality of the people's power. Under the literal translation our status in relation to the Government is quite clear.

One might argue that these discrepancies are insignificant and besides Article 25.5.4 provides that the Irish text prevails in the event of a conflict. However, far from correcting the divergences, this significant document; previously available from the Government Publications Office on Molesworth Street, was pulled from print without explanation at some time before the second Lisbon referendum. This version containing the Irish text and both the literal and modern translations, not to mention an in-depth analysis of the divergences between the two, is no longer available to the public. The All Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution have somehow decided in our 'best interest' that this document should no longer be produced. Perhaps there was an element of deception when producing the modern translations; who knows? Thankfully however, the Committee have made electronic copies available, tucked away at the bottom of their 'Publications' page.

WHY THE GOVERNMENT WANTS TO CONTROL YOUR PAYCHECK: AN ATTACK ON THE SOVEREIGN MOVEMENT

© Colin Ryan – www.WeAreChange.ie

Last summer in the UK a proposal was being discussed by the Inland Revenue to take away control of your weekly or monthly pay from your employers and put it into their hands. The idea is that your employer will make deductions for union fees and pensions and the like and then the money is paid to the Revenue who will deduct everyone's tax as they see fit. Finally the Revenue will then pay the balance into your bank account.

It had a public consultation period that ended 23/09/2010, after which they will be making revised proposals to the government to introduce legislation. Most people would balk at the idea of the government coming anywhere near their private income but the BBC have been selling the story as if it is a fabulous idea that nobody should have any problems with.

The way they will spin the idea is that it will save money for companies in accounting and will eliminate the duplication of work between accounts departments in companies and the revenue and the eventual balancing act that occurs. Perhaps there might be a saving overall, there is logic in that, but this is not why they want their hands in your pockets.

That is the question they will not push on the BBC, i.e. why exactly do the government want so desperately to take control of your money and to have access to your bank accounts? This seems quite openly now to be the next big step in the steady construction of the Big Brother state. A state that already sports CCTV cameras everywhere, even in homes, spying on your telecoms and emails, and a campaign of "report on your neighbours" that is disintegrating society.

David Cameron and Nick Clegg campaigned in the election to deconstruct this surveillance system that they blamed the Labour government for constructing, yet, as with every administration in the so called free world, they seem to be doing the complete reverse of what they promised before they were elected and are building upon what has been left to them. What is the motivation for this though and why now?

Well in this writer's opinion what we are seeing here is a massive gamble by the government in reaction to the growing understanding amongst the awakened members of the public to the corruption of the system. To be more specific, there has been a huge awakening over the last two or three years to the fact that government is not in fact representing the people in the country, but is working for a corporate elite and managing a system of law that is solely commercial in nature.

The Common Law we thought we were living under has been replaced by Commercial or Admiralty Law of the Sea and is implemented through Statutes and Acts that have no jurisdiction over flesh and blood men and women or above Common Law. These statutes and acts are all contracts and can therefore only be acted upon us with our consent.

This is the great fraud. If you should look in the companies register you will find that the government is now a corporation, as well as every court, police force, council, utility, even schools, prisons and all government departments including Revenue, all operating for profit and generating revenue. Hence the massive increase in legislation with monetary value attached to be extracted from us.

People who have discovered this and have researched remedies to it have discovered how to beat the system. They have discovered that they can choose whether to operate in the public domain, using their legal fiction corporate entity, IE their NAME (all caps), which is registered to the government by your birth certificate. It is owned by them and so can be acted upon by them, as it appears on any correspondence with government or utilities etc; or, alternatively people can choose not to use it but to operate in the private domain as themselves. In doing this they are not contracting commercially with the government system and therefore cannot be acted upon by the system.

How are these two linked? Well by not contracting with the system, people are able to avoid paying fines, taxes, bills etc issued by councils, utilities, courts, police, and revenue. Clearly the information has been spreading far and wide and is becoming a major worry that the scam might be realised by more and more people very quickly and has forced the government into this kind of knee jerk reaction. So by taking away control of your pay the government will give themselves the power to deduct any amount of tax it deems correct.

It may also raise tax at will without any possibility of taxation revolt. Furthermore they will have the ability to deduct from your pay any amount from any fines, council charges, court orders, debts, etc before you ever see your money in your account. All of the statutes, that are unenforceable on men and women without their consent, will be monetarily enforced before we even have the chance to lawfully do anything about it. This is how they are going to destroy the sovereign freeman movement which has discovered the corporate corruption that is masquerading as government in western nations.

This will become a cashless society where everyone is a state employee in effect and you are dependent upon the state for money. Anyone who steps out of line or harbours opinions that differ from that of the state can then have their lives made very difficult indeed.

This is something that our elders fought against, that even our own crazies in our governments tell us was a terrible evil system when it was operated by Hitler or Stalin or Mao or in any other historical dictatorship. Yet here they are implementing it themselves in a new and improved version that is right out of Orwell's 1984.

This is not going to be isolated to the UK. They are simply a testing ground to see how easily it can be implemented. Make no mistake, all other countries will follow suit, especially in Europe. Undoubtedly Ireland will be the first to fall in line as usual as they are still in reality under Crown (City of London) rule. This will force an even bigger sea change in the minds of the people who already understand the fake reality of the system we live in. It will force them to make the UK irrelevant, leave the Corporate UK lawfully and exist as a private man or woman on the land, as many already have. It will mean groups will arise who no longer recognise the jurisdiction of the government over the land and this is going to lead to major conflict with the corporate police state that is being built.

As has happened before during depressions down the centuries, groups or regions are going to start issuing their own money and barter so as to avoid joining the UK Corporate system. This has already started happening in some places as a way of keeping the money in a town or village by issuing town money to trade in local outlets only. This is happening worldwide now as the system starts to crumble. The black market is going to grow exponentially and the number of people renouncing UK citizenship will likewise increase.

This will accelerate the system towards failure. So communities need to get together now and plan for their removal from the overreaching and interference of the corporate government. By doing this they will hasten the system's demise and be better placed to prosper when it inevitably fails.

In a way this kind of outlandish legislative intrusion into our private lives by big government, who promised to reverse this trend, will only serve to wake up millions more people to the lies as the veneer falls from the tyranny of a government owned by and run for the benefit of an elite group of banking families

Police Perverts Go Mobile!

A curious thing happened to me on the way home recently. I lived at the time in a cul de sac with 3 houses on either side of the narrow road and closed at one end by a large 2m high wall.

On pulling into the cul-de-sac I was confronted by a large van blocking the road as it clearly had a problem turning in the narrow street. This was about the size of a medium removals vans.

It was having so much bother turning in the street that I had to reverse onto the grass verge outside a neighbour's house beyond the pavement.

The van eventually got turned around and started to drive past me onto the main road when to my horror I read on the side of it POLICE MOBILE CCTV UNIT!

Now, this cul-de-sac is well lit and the area can be clearly viewed from the main road some 80m away so why does a massive Police CCTV need to drive past these 6 houses in the dark? Call me cynical but it would appear that there is no other reason than that they were spying on the public in the 'PRIVACY' of their own homes and that this is part of a concerted programme of surveillance of the public regardless of where they are or any right of privacy they may seem to be under the delusional impression they have.

When will ordinary people stand up for themselves and start to challenge these police perverts and thugs who seem to think that anything goes and that the public are their playthings to be spied upon in their living rooms, kitchens, and yes, even their bedrooms?

These invasive and quite frankly outrageous surveillance operations MUST STOP! The public and the police services themselves have to wake up to the fact that their children are being conditioned to live in an urban prison of their parent's making!

The Nuts and Bolts of the DIABOLIC 'BUSINESS CYCLE'

■ Brian Ó Caithnia

www.irishlibertyforum.org

The word diabolic usually refers to evil and in Christianity, specifically the Devil. It is interesting to note that the Greek root of the word is as follows: dia boline which means a splitting in two or a tearing apart of something whole. This is the essence of the effect that the artificial credit expansion process we witness in the banking system today has upon the entire structure of production in society. The simultaneous over-expansion of the production of consumer goods (such as food and drink, which are near to the consumer in terms of production) and capital goods (such as new factories and equipment, which are farthest from the consumer) brought about by fiscal forces unleashed upon the market by the government's central banks leads to a systemic ripping apart of the structure of production in society.

Before I begin, let me briefly introduce the reader to the origin of prices and production. The free-market is a system of exchange that is built upon a delicate and finely tuned instrument of information transmittal, namely the pricing system. Market prices give the entrepreneur an indication of the scarcity and relative demand for a good. Entrepreneurs take this information to make estimates about how they can better coordinate the resources available with the needs of consumers. A price, say the price of a loaf of bread, is determined by the amount of money customers are willing to spend on the bread balanced against the amount of money bakers are willing to sell their bread at. In a sense, it is a balancing act between bakers and bread eaters.

The interest rate is the market price for present goods with respect to future goods. The value of money today is always worth more than money in the future because people always prefer to consume now rather than in the future so for someone to save there must be a greater reward to be had for the saver in the future. Just as with the price of a loaf of bread, the interest rate is determined by a balancing act between savers (otherwise known as capitalists or people who have savings to lend out) and borrowers (entrepreneurs and people looking for the temporary use of other people's money). If many people begin to save in society the interest rate will tend to fall which encourages borrowers to take out loans because of the excess supply. Likewise, if people begin to divest themselves of their savings the interest rate will tend to rise as the supply of savings diminishes and thus less money is available to lend to borrowers. The interest rate coordinates production over time and rations money to its most efficient uses. A high interest rate usually indicates a risky project and a low interest rate a relatively safe investment.

A simple matching of borrowers and savers should be how the banking system works. It should be a straight-forward business enterprise like the bakery. But now, we leave the world of common sense and enter the real world.

Today, the economics profession is dominated by a school of thought called the Keynesian School that is obsessed with maintaining interest rates below the real market level as they believe this to be necessary to stimulate 'growth', consumption, consumerism and debt. To force interest rates below the true market level determined by people's savings rates, the government uses the central bank to flood the banking system with money created out of thin air, artificially simulating a society with a higher savings rate. As Murray Rothbard explains

"The new money pours forth on the loan market and lowers the loan rate of interest. It looks as if the supply of saved funds for investment increases, and the interest rate is lowered. Businessmen in short are misled by the bank inflation into believing that the supply of saved funds is greater than it really is. Now, when saved funds increase, businessmen invest in 'longer processes of production' i.e. the capital structure is lengthened, especially in the higher orders most remote from the consumer. Businessmen take their newly acquired funds and bid up the prices of capital and other producers' goods, and this stimulates a shift of investment from the "lower" (near the consumer) to the "higher" orders of production (furthest from the consumer)"<sup>i</sup>

In sum, businessmen are misled by bank credit inflation to invest too much in higher-order capital goods, which could only be purposely sustained through greater real savings and investment; as soon as the inflation permeates to the mass of the people, the old consumption-investment proportion is re-established, and business investments in the higher orders the furthest from consumption are seen to be wasted.

The bank credit expansion sets into motion the business cycle in all its phases; the inflationary boom, marked by the expansion of the money supply and by malinvestment; the crisis, which arrives when credit expansion ceases and malinvestment becomes evident; and the depression recovery, which far from being an evil scourge, is the necessary adjustment process by which the economy returns to the most efficient ways of satisfying consumer desires.

Many factories are closed, particularly in the stages furthest from consumption (such as the construction industry in Ireland), numerous investment projects launched in error are paralyzed, and many workers are laid off. Furthermore pessimism spreads throughout society, and the notion that an inexplicable economic crisis has erupted, shortly after people had begun to believe that the boom and optimism, far from reaching their peak, would last indefinitely, demoralises even the most persistently high-spirited. As Ludwig von Mises wrote;

The boom produces impoverishment. But still more disastrous are its moral ravages. It makes people despondent and dispirited. The more optimistic they were under the illusory prosperity of the boom, the greater is their despair and their feeling of frustration.<sup>ii</sup>

The business cycle is truly a diabolic event in every meaning of the word.

The CFR according to Carroll Quigley

■ Paul Flynn

It's a name more and more people are learning about but what is the Council on Foreign Relations? Is it as Barack Obama claimed during the 2008 presidential campaign "a forum where a bunch of people talk about foreign policy" or something more sinister as many researchers are claiming?

Many societies and organisations that have gone throughout history have all drawn varying degrees of controversy. Is the controversy that is linked with this group, that although is not a secret society in the strictest sense but is of itself secretive, totally justified? In this article we will look at the arguments made by a former CFR member and insider to make the case of what the society exactly is and what its aims are today.

Carroll Quigley (1910-1977) was a noted historian who spent most of his academic career lecturing at the School of Foreign Services at Georgetown University from the years 1941 to 1976. One well known student of his during those years was former US president Bill Clinton. During a speech given by Clinton in 1991 while launching his presidential campaign and during Clinton's 1992 acceptance speech he named Professor Quigley as a major influence.

Professor Quigley was also a CFR insider and is widely respected. In his book "Tragedy and Hope" published in 1966 he documents the following:

"At the end of the war of 1914, it became clear that the organization [the Cecil Rhodes founded Round Table Group] of this system had to be greatly extended. Once again the task was entrusted to Lionel Curtis who established, in England and each dominion, a front organization to the existing local Round Table Group. This front organization, called the Royal Institute of International Affairs, had as its nucleus in each area the existing submerged Round Table Group. In New York it was known as the Council on Foreign Relations, and was a front for J. P. Morgan and Company in association with the very small American Round Table Group. The American organizers were dominated by the large number of Morgan "experts," including Lamont and Beer, who had gone to the Paris Peace Conference and there became close friends with the similar group of English "experts" which had been recruited by the Milner group. In fact, the original plans for the Royal Institute of International Affairs and the Council on Foreign Relations were drawn up at Paris. The Council of the RIIA (which, by Curtis's energy came to be housed in Chatham House, across St. James's Square from the Astors, and was soon known by the name of this headquarters) and the board of the Council on Foreign Relations have carried ever since the marks of their origin. Until 1960 the council at Chatham House was dominated by the dwindling group of Milner's associates, while the paid staff members were largely the agents of Lionel Curtis. The Round Table for years (until 1961) was edited from the back door of Chatham House grounds in Ormond Yard, and its telephone came through the Chatham House switchboard."

It is important to note the link made with the Round Table (the Round Table was the mother while the CFR was the daughter of this group) to fully grasp the enormity of the ambition that the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) has for America and then through sister organizations around the whole world. These sister organizations include the Royal Institute of International Affairs which is in London and also the recently founded European Council on Foreign Relations. Just to point out also that currently in CFR publications they now openly admit that they have ambitions for the establishment of a World Government with headlines such as "Global Governance Program" which was published May 2008, but they also have produced many publications going back many decades discussing this aim.

To understand where the CFR are leading the United States and through other related organizations around the world we need to look at the aims of the controlling factions. Professor Quigley's book "Tragedy and Hope" details how the money houses of America such as the Morgans and the Rockefellers have dominated the CFR from its creation in 1921. Its first major ambition was to get the United States to join the League of Nations as it never did after the Treaty of Versailles in 1919 as was planned. After World War II this became a reality when the League of Nations was replaced by the United Nations, which the United States did join with the CFR having complete control of the United States Government by the time of Franklin D. Roosevelt's presidency.

Professor Quigley, a man who loved to document history in immense and brilliant detail said this of the aims of the CFR controlling factions in "Tragedy and Hope":

"[T]he powers of financial capitalism had another far-reaching aim, nothing less than to create a world system of financial control in private hands able to dominate the political system of each country and the economy of the world as a whole this system was to be controlled in a feudalist fashion by the central banks of the world acting in concert by secret agreements arrived at in frequent private meetings and conferences. The apex of the system was to be the Bank for International Settlements in Basle, Switzerland, a private bank owned and controlled by the world's central banks which were themselves private corporations...."

The "powers of financial capitalism" as it is referred to by Quigley are the money houses of America and elsewhere around the World. Such names include Rothschild, Rockefeller and Morgan. If a person was to read these comments when they were made in the 1960s it may seem like fanciful nonsense but anyone who is following the financial corruption being perpetrated by private institutions such as the Federal Reserve in the US would agree that this is without any doubt happening today as described by Professor Quigley.

Soy a Healthy Alternative? Don't Bet on it

■ F. William Engdahl

Today millions turn to soybean products in the mistaken belief they are doing something wonderfully healthy for their bodies. The reality is quite opposite but we are not told because the soybean lobby is one of the most powerful arms of US agribusiness and of the GMO cartel. Before you reach for that carton of soymilk at the health food store you might want to read a little.

Soy is sold in all health food stores which makes people think it's a healthy alternative to cow's milk. Soy is found today in countless food products from tofu and tacos to baby formula and burgers. A Big Mac burger by US regulation is allowed to contain 30% soymeal. Soy products have proliferated as a "healthy source of protein," with a reputation for being all natural and good. New studies are raising questions over whether the ingredients in soy might increase the risks of thyroid abnormalities, affect brain function in men and lead to hidden developmental abnormalities in infants.

The core of the concern is the chemical makeup of soy. Note that today all soybeans from the USA and from Argentina, the world's two biggest soybean producers is Monsanto Genetically Manipulated or GMO soybean. Here we are not even addressing the added possible health risks of eating GMO soy. Even ordinary non-GMO soy is loaded with problems. Soy contains a natural chemical that mimics estrogen, the female hormone. Animal studies show that this chemical can alter sexual development. Two glasses of soy milk a day, over the course of one month, contain enough of the chemical to change the timing of a woman's menstrual cycle.

Isoflavones in soybeans

Soybeans contain phytochemicals, biologically active components derived from plants. The ones of concern are isoflavones. There is strong evidence that the isoflavones in soy depress the thyroid gland. The consequence is also irregular heartbeat. Soy falls into a category of foods known as goitrogens -- vegetables, grains and foods that promote formation of goiter -- an enlarged thyroid. Some goitrogens also have a definite antithyroid effect, and appear to be able to slow thyroid function, and in some cases, trigger thyroid disease. These concerns have been studied for years, but were raised specifically by Food and Drug Administration (FDA) researchers Daniel Doerge and Daniel Sheehan. Doerge and Sheehan were the FDA's key experts on soy. In 2000, Doerge and Sheehan wrote a controversial letter of protest (PDF) to their own employer, protesting the positive health claims for soy that the FDA was approving at the time. They wrote:

...there is abundant evidence that some of the isoflavones found in soy, including genistein and equol, a metabolite of daidzein, demonstrate toxicity in estrogen sensitive tissues and in the thyroid. This is true for a number of species, including humans. Additionally, isoflavones are inhibitors of the thyroid peroxidase which makes T3 and T4. Inhibition can be expected to generate thyroid abnormalities, including goiter and autoimmune thyroiditis. There exists a significant body of animal data that demonstrates goitrogenic and even carcinogenic effects of soy products. Moreover, there are significant reports of goitrogenic effects from soy consumption in human infants and adults.

Soybeans also contain potent enzyme-inhibitors that block uptake of trypsin and other enzymes the body needs for protein digestion. Normal cooking does not de-activate these harmful anti-nutrients, which can cause serious gastric distress, reduced protein digestion and can lead to chronic deficiencies in amino acid uptake.

In addition, soybeans also contain hemagglutinin, a clot-promoting substance which causes red blood cells to clump together. These clustered blood cells cannot properly absorb oxygen for distribution to the body's tissues, and are unable to help in maintaining good cardiac health. Hemagglutinin and trypsin inhibitors are both "growth depressant" substances. Although these enzyme inhibitors are found in reduced levels within precipitated soy products like tofu, they are not completely eliminated. For this reason, only fermented products of soy such as tempeh or miso are recommended.

When a baby is given a soy formula, when you factor in the size of the baby along with the estrogenic effects of soy, it is the equivalent of exposing the baby to five birth control pills a day. Millions of babies are on soy formulas. Dr. Jill Schneider, associate professor of biological sciences at Lehigh University in Bethlehem,

Pennsylvania in a study of hamsters found that a component of soy beans - isoflavones - significantly accelerated the onset of puberty in the rodents. She points out that many babies who are allergic to cow's milk are fed soy-based formulas which contain isoflavones. Isoflavones can act like estrogen, a natural hormone important in the development of both male and female humans. Some researchers believe it is child abuse to feed a baby soy formula. A baby fed soy will receive, through the phytoestrogens, the equivalent of approximately 5 birth control pills per day! The damage is incalculable.iii Schneider says, "You must draw your own conclusions from my study, but my conclusion is this: More research should be done on soy isoflavones before feeding soy infant formulas to babies."

In 1998, investigators reported that the daily exposure of infants to isoflavones in soy infant formula is 6 to 11 times higher on a body-weight basis than the dose that has hormonal effects in adults consuming soy foods. Concentrations of isoflavones in infants who were fed soy-based formula were 13,000 to 22,000 times higher than concentrations in infants on cow's milk formula.

In 1992, the Swiss health service estimated that 100 grams of soy protein provided the estrogenic equivalent of the Pill.

Soybeans also contain an anti-nutrient called "phytic acid", as all beans do. But soybeans have higher levels of phytic acid than any other legume. Phytic acid can block absorption of certain minerals, including magnesium, calcium, iron and zinc. Epidemiological studies have shown that people in Third World Countries who have high consumption of grains and soy also commonly have deficiencies in these minerals.

This is of particular concern with regard to babies who are using soy-based infant formulas.

Soybeans as provided by nature are not suitable for human consumption. Only after long fermentation, or extensive processing, including chemical extractions and high temperatures, are the beans, or the soy protein isolate, suitable for digestion when eaten.

The soybean lobby

The recent popularity of soybeans as a "health" alternative goes directly to the agribusiness industry. The world soybean trade is one of the most cartelized and well-financed machines in the trillion euro global agribusiness industry. It is dominated by four giant companies—Archer Daniels Midland (ADM), Bunge, Cargill and Dreyfus—ABCD as they are referred to in the trade. The four are said by agriculture insiders to control policy at the US Department of Agriculture as well as in the European Commission in Brussels.

The soybean cartel finances a highly slick public relations machine that propagates the myth of the remarkable health benefits of a soy diet. In the US it is funnelled through two organizations - United Soybean Board (USB) and the American Soybean Association (ASA). They define the policy, strategy and lobby Congress or the EU Commission. All US soybean producers pay a mandatory assessment of up to 1% of the net market price of soybeans, giving a war chest of US $80 million annually to "strengthen the position of soybeans in the marketplace and maintain and expand domestic and foreign markets for uses for soybeans and soybean products." ADM alone spends some $5 million a year to market its GMO soybeans.

By the way, more than 90% of all commercial soybeans produced in the world are genetically modified. As I detail in my best-selling book, Seeds of Destruction - The Hidden Agenda of Genetic Manipulation, soybeans have been specially targeted for GMO treatment as soy is so essential as a "power feed" for cattle, pigs and now for humans. All GMO soybeans use special matcher chemical herbicides based on Monsanto's Roundup containing glyphosate and other "proprietary" chemicals that have been independently tested at Caen University in France by scientists under Prof. Seralini who found that the herbicide used to grow soybeans is toxic to cells in a human embryo in concentrations many times less than that used in Roundup garden herbicides.

Independent scientists say there is at present insufficient data to suggest that soy has a protective role against any medical conditions or diseases.

Gates Foundation Moves Closer to GMO Giant Monsanto

by F. William Engdahl

The world's largest private tax-exempt foundation, the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation in the United States has just taken a major step to link its agenda to that of the genetic manipulation conglomerate, Monsanto. By buying stock shares in the world's largest private seed supplier and the world's most aggressive proliferator of GMO plants, the Gates Foundation further confirms that its agenda is anything but helping poor Africans to a healthy future. The agenda of both Monsanto and of the Gates Foundation is eugenics—systematic “cleaning” of the human race of perhaps several billion darker-skinned peoples.

The US Securities & Exchange Commission where by US law such stock purchases must be registered, has reported that the Gates Foundation in 2010 has bought some 500,000 shares of agribusiness giant, Monsanto worth more than $23 millions. A year before the size of Monsanto shares held by the world's largest foundation was only $360,000.

This direct Monsanto investment by the Gates Foundation put a new light on the Gates large investments in agriculture projects in Africa where they claim to want to “alleviate poverty and hunger among small farmers.”

Monsanto has had a negative, not positive, impact on food supply in Africa. In South Africa in 2009, Monsanto's GMO maize failed to produce kernels and hundreds of farmers were devastated. According to Mariam Mayet, director of the Africa Centre for Biosafety in Johannesburg, some farmers suffered up to an 80% crop failure. While Monsanto compensated the large-scale farmers to whom it directly sold the faulty product, it gave nothing to the small-scale farmers to whom it had handed out free sachets of seeds. “When the economic power of Gates is coupled with the irresponsibility of Monsanto, the outlook for African smallholders is not very promising,” said Mayet.

The open Gates purchase of a large share of Monsanto shares confirms what many opponents of the Gates Africa agenda had suspected. The Gates Foundation together with the Rockefeller Foundation founded the Alliance for a Green Revolution in Africa (AGRA), headed by former UN Secretary General, Kofi Annan. AGRA Watch has uncovered links between the Foundation's grantees and Monsanto. Some 70% of Gates grant recipients under AGRA in Kenya work directly with Monsanto on agricultural development projects. There are also high-level personnel ties between Gates' Africa work and Monsanto. Rob Horsch, a former Monsanto Vice President of International Development Partnerships is Senior Program Officer of the Gates Agricultural Development Program. The GMO project was initially begun by grants over $100 million from the Rockefeller Foundation, a major backer of population reduction and eugenics.

Because of resistance across Africa to buying patented Monsanto GMO seeds, the agribusiness giant, Monsanto, has moved to push its seeds on Africa through the hidden route of the Gates AGRA project, to promote the spread of agribusiness large scale farming in a region which holds some of this planet's richest unspoiled soils. AGRA, like the 1960's Mexico Green Revolution of the Rockefeller Foundation, under a false promise of wonderful productivity gains and food abundance, in reality destroys traditional small-scale farming and bankrupts millions of local farmers who are then forced to flee into overcrowded urban areas desperate for work. AGRA relies on expensive inputs such as chemical fertilizers, genetically modified seeds, and patented herbicides. Far from reducing hunger, as experience in Asia and Latin America shows, it will increase hunger as small farmers are forced off the land and markets are taken over by large multinational corporations. The Kenya Biodiversity Coalition charges, “AGRA is poison for our farming systems and livelihoods. Under the philanthropic banner of greening agriculture, AGRA will eventually eat away what little is left of sustainable small-scale farming in Africa.”

The International Assessment of Agricultural Knowledge, Science and Technology for Development (IAASTD), in a 2008 report initiated by the World Bank and the UN, concluded that small-scale agroecological farming is more suitable for the third world than the industrial agricultural model favored by Gates and Monsanto. The report warns that “continued reliance on simplistic technological fixes—including transgenic crops—will not reduce persistent hunger and poverty and could exacerbate environmental problems and worsen social inequity...small-scale agroecological farming may offer one of the best means to feed the hungry while protecting the planet.”

Gates Foundation chief executive Patty Stonesifer defended the Gates investments, stating, “It would be naïve...to think that changing the foundation's investment policy could stop the human suffering blamed on the practices of companies in which it invests billions of dollars.” This decision is in direct contradiction to the Foundation's official “Investment Philosophy”, which, according to its website lists “areas in which the endowment will not invest, such as companies whose profit model is centrally tied to corporate activity that [Bill and Melinda] find egregious. This is why the endowment does not invest in tobacco stocks.”

Bill Gates as well as Stonesifer are both founding members of a billionaires'-only elite club calling itself the Good Club. It was founded in May 2009 on the invitation of billionaire eugenics backer David Rockefeller, Gates and billionaires George Soros, Ted Turner (of CNN) and other selected guests, reportedly to discuss ways of pooling their riches and efforts to “reduce world population growth.” Gates and Buffett recently began a worldwide campaign to recruit billionaires in other countries, including China, to coordinate giving and strategies, a move that has caused warnings of amassing concentrated wealth and power in ways that are not transparent and hinder democratic diversity.

GMO Crop Catastrophe in USA a lesson for EU

□ F. William Engdahl

Recently the unelected potentates of the EU Commission in Brussels have sought to override what has repeatedly been shown to be the overwhelming opposition of the European Union population to the spread of Genetically Modified Organisms (GMO) in EU agriculture. EU Commission President and Iraq war backed Manuel Barosso now has a Maltese accountant as health and environment Commissioner to rubber stamp GMO as OK. The former EU Environment Commissioner from Greece was a ferocious GMO opponent. Now Monsanto, Syngenta and the Four Horsemen of the GMO Apocalypse see the chance to ram GMO through with new rules. Before things get too far along, they would do well to take a closer look at the world GMO test lab, the USA. There GMO crops are anything but beneficial. Just the opposite.

What is carefully kept out of the Monsanto and other agribusiness propaganda in promoting genetically manipulated crops as an alternative to conventional is the fact that in the entire world until the present, all GMO crops have been manipulated and patented for only two things—to be resistant or “tolerant” to the patented highly toxic herbicide glyphosate chemicals that Monsanto and the others force farmers to buy as condition for buying their patented GMO seeds. The second trait is GMO seeds that have been engineered genetically to resist specific insects. Contrary to public relations myths promoted by the agribusiness giants in their own self-interest, there exists not one single GMO seed that provides a greater harvest yield than conventional, nor one that requires less toxic chemical herbicides. That is for the simple reason there is no profit to be made in such.

As prominent GMO opponent and biologist, Dr Mae-Wan Ho of the Institute of Science in London has noted, the companies such as Monsanto build into their seeds herbicide-tolerance (HT) due to glyphosate-insensitive form of the gene coding for the enzyme targeted by the herbicide. The enzyme is derived from soil bacterium Agrobacterium tumefaciens. Insect-resistance is due to one or more toxin genes derived from the soil bacterium Bt (Bacillus thuringiensis). The United States began large scale commercial planting of GMO plants, mainly soybeans and corn and cotton around 1997. By now, GM crops have taken over between 85 percent to 91 percent of the areas planted with the three major crops, soybean, corn and cotton in the US, on nearly 171 million acres.

Giant super-weeds plague

The ecological time-bomb that came with the GMO according to Ho, is about to explode. Over several years of constant application of patented glyphosate herbicides such as Monsanto's famous and highly Roundup, new herbicide-resistant “super-weeds” have evolved, nature's response to man-made attempts to violate it. The super-weeds require significantly more not less herbicide to control.

Giant Pigweed

ABC Television, a major US national network, made a recent documentary about the super-weeds under the rubric, “super weeds that can't be killed.”

They interviewed farmers and scientists across Arkansas who described fields overrun with giant pigweed plants that can withstand as much glyphosate as farmers are able to spray. They interviewed one farmer who spent almost €400,000 in only three months in a failed attempt to kill the new super-weeds.

The new super-weeds are so robust that harvester combines are unable to harvest the fields and hand tools break trying to cut them down. At least 400,000 hectares of soybean and cotton in Arkansas alone have become invested with this new mutant biological plague. Detailed data on other agricultural regions is not available but believed similar. The pro-GMO and pro-agribusiness US Department of Agriculture has been reported lying about the true state of US crop harvest partly to hide the grim reality and to prevent an explosive revolt against GMO in the world's largest GMO market.

One variety of super-weed, palmer pigweed, can grow up to 2.4 meters high, withstands severe heat and prolonged droughts, and produces thousands of seeds with a root system that drains nutrients away from crops. If left unchecked, it takes over an entire field in a year. Some farmers have been forced to abandon their land. To date palmer pigweed infestation in GMO crop regions has been identified in addition to Arkansas, also in Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, New Mexico, Mississippi and most recently, Alabama and Missouri.

Weed scientists at the University of Georgia estimate that just two palmer pigweed plants in every 6 meter length of cotton row can reduce yield by at least 23 percent. A single weed plant can produce 45, 000 seeds.

Roundup toxic danger being covered-up

Glyphosate is the most widely used herbicide in the US and the world at large. Patented and sold by Monsanto since the 1970s under the trade name Roundup, it is a mandatory component of buying GMO seeds from Monsanto. Just go to your local garden store and ask for it and read the label carefully.

As I detail in my book, Seeds of Destruction: The Hidden Agenda of Genetic Manipulation, GMO crops and patented seeds were developed in the 1970's with significant financial support from the pro-eugenics Rockefeller Foundation, by what were essentially chemical companies—Monsanto Chemicals, DuPont and Dow Chemicals. All three were involved in the scandal of the highly toxic Agent Orange as well as Dioxin in the 1970's and lied to cover up the true damage to its own employees as well as to civilian and military populations exposed.

The patented GMO seeds were seen as a clever way to force increased purchase of their agricultural chemicals such as Roundup. Farmers must sign a legal contract with Monsanto in which it stipulates that only Monsanto Roundup pesticide may be used unless granted special permission. Farmers are thus trapped both in buying new seeds from Monsanto each harvest and buying the toxic glyphosate.

France's University of Caen, in a team led by molecular biologist, Gilles-Eric Seralini, did a study that showed Roundup contained one specific inert ingredient, polyethoxylated tallowamine, or POEA. Seralini's team demonstrated that POEA in Roundup was more deadly to human embryonic, placental and umbilical cord cells than even the glyphosate itself. Monsanto refuses to release details of the contents of its Roundup other than glyphosate, calling it “proprietary.”

** RECOMMENDED READ **

Seeds of Destruction -The Hidden Agenda of Genetic Manipulation
by F. William Engdahl

www.GlobalResearch.ca , 2007 ISBN 978-0-937147-2-2

This skillfully researched book focuses on how a small socio-political American elite seeks to establish control over the very basis of human survival: the provision of our daily bread. “Control the food and you control the people.”

This is no ordinary book about the perils of GMO. Engdahl takes the reader inside the corridors of power, into the backrooms of the science labs, behind closed doors in the corporate boardrooms. The author cogently reveals a diabolical World of profit-driven political intrigue, government corruption and coercion, where genetic manipulation and the patenting of life forms are used to gain worldwide control over food production. If the book often reads as a crime story, that should come as no surprise. For that is what it is.

Engdahl's carefully argued critique goes far beyond the familiar controversies surrounding the practice of genetic modification as a scientific technique. The book is an eye-opener, a must-read for all those committed to the causes of social justice and World peace.

damage. 2,4-D is a component of Agent Orange, produced by Monsanto for use in Vietnam in the 1960s.

US Farmers turn to organics

Farmers across the United States are reported to be going back to conventional non-GMO crops instead. According to a new report from the US Department of Agriculture, retail sales of organic food went up to $21.1 billion in 2008 from $3.6 billion in 1997. The market is so active that organic farms have struggled at times to produce sufficient supply to keep up with the rapid growth in consumer demand, leading to periodic shortages of organic products.

The new UK Conservative-Liberal coalition government is strongly backing lifting a de facto ban on GMO in that country. UK Chief Scientific Adviser, Prof. John Beddington, recently wrote an article in which he misleadingly claimed “The next decade will see the development of combinations of desirable traits and the introduction of new traits such as drought tolerance. By mid-century much more radical options involving highly polygenic traits may be feasible.” He went on to promise “cloned animals with engineered innate immunity to diseases” and more. I think we can pass that one up, thank you.

A recent study by Iowa State University and the US Department of Agriculture assessing the performance of farms during the three-year transition it takes to switch from conventional to certified organic production showed notable advantages of organic farming over GMO or even conventional non-GMO crops. In an experiment lasting four years—three years transition and first year organic—the study showed that although yields dropped initially, they equalized in the third year, and by the fourth year, the organic yields were ahead of the conventional for both soybean and corn.

As well, the International Assessment of Agricultural Knowledge, Science and Technology for Development (IAASTD) has recently been published, the result of three-year deliberation by 400 participating scientists and non-government representatives from 110 countries around the world. It came to the conclusion that small scale organic agriculture is the way ahead for coping with hunger, social inequities and environmental disasters. As Dr Ho argues, a fundamental shift in farming practice is needed urgently, before the agricultural catastrophe spreads further across Germany and the EU to the rest of the world.

The Seralini study found that Roundup's inert ingredients amplified the toxic effect on human cells—even at concentrations much more diluted than those used on farms and lawns! The French team studied multiple concentrations of Roundup, from the typical agricultural or lawn dose down to concentrations 100,000 times more dilute than the products sold on shelves. The researchers saw cell damage at all concentrations.

Glyphosate and Roundup are advertised as “less toxic to us than table salt” in a pamphlet from the Biotechnology Institute promoting GMO crops as ‘Weed Warrior.’ Thirteen years of GMO crops in the USA has increased overall pesticide use by 318 million pounds, not decreased as promised by the Four Horsemen of the GMO Apocalypse. The extra disease burden on the nation from that alone is considerable.

Nonetheless after introduction of Monsanto GMO seeds commercially in the USA, use of glyphosate has risen more than 1,500% between 1994 and 2005. In the USA some 100 million pounds of glyphosate are used on lawns and farms every year, and over the last 13 years, it has been applied to more than a billion acres. When questioned, Monsanto's technical development manager, Rick Cole, reportedly said the problems were “manageable.” He advised farmers to alternate crops and use different makes of herbicides produced by Monsanto.

Monsanto is encouraging farmers to mix glyphosate with its older herbicides such as 2,4-D, banned in Sweden, Denmark and Norway for links to cancer and reproductive and neurological

Why Afghanistan? Maybe its the Heroin Profit!

■ F. William Engdahl

More and more people are beginning to question the basic reason American, British, German and soldiers from countless other nationalities in NATO member countries are returning home from Afghanistan in body bags. The question must be asked: Warum Afghanistan? Increasingly the answer is pointing to one deadly word—heroin. Now the British Ministry of Defense is being forced to cover up the deeper story by launching an “investigation” into whether its soldiers in Afghanistan have been dipping a hand into the lucrative Afghan opium and heroin traffic.

In Britain, soldiers returning from Afghanistan are now being subjected to rigorous security checks. There are claims that some are involved in heroin trafficking. The British Ministry of Defence confirms that military police are investigating a tip-off alleging that soldiers sent to fight the Taliban were buying drugs from Afghan dealers and shipping them back to Britain.

The claim is that heroin and other drugs are being smuggled in by a handful of the hundreds of soldiers returning each week to Royal Air Force base, Brize Norton. All returning personnel are being subjected to sniffer dogs, body and luggage searches, and covert monitoring.

MoD officials confirmed that the tougher security will remain in force while ‘unsubstantiated’ claims that troops were buying illegal drugs and using military aircraft to ship them home were thoroughly investigated. ‘We are aware of these allegations,’ said a spokesman to the British press. ‘Although they are unsubstantiated, we take any such reports very seriously and we have already tightened existing procedures in Afghanistan and in the UK.’ The British press reports that the inquiry is focused on British and Canadian personnel at airports in Camp Bastion and Kandahar.

The real heroin mafia

While no doubt the occasional British or Canadian soldier might be tempted to dip his fingers into the lucrative if dangerous heroin business, the real heroin mafia is not being mentioned. In 2000, the US made the decision to invade Afghanistan on the flimsy pretext that the Taliban regime then had refused to hand over Osama bin Laden. The Kabul Taliban government replied that they could not do so without first having proof from the US authorities that bin Laden was the instigator of the 911 World Trade and Pentagon attacks. Such legal procedure is normal in most civilized countries. Instead, the Bush Administration decided unilaterally to bomb the Taliban out of office and to occupy the country militarily, installing their CIA-linked puppet, Karzai, as President.

Before they had been driven out by force, the Taliban had imposed an opium eradication policy to rid the country of the heroin business. According to official UN Drug Office data, the Taliban had almost entirely eliminated cultivation of opium by Afghan peasants by 2001.

Then, with the protective umbrella of the US military, the Karzai family was put at the top of what has grown since 2001 into the world's source for 93% of all heroin. NATO is “guarding” the world's opium monopoly, opium and heroin that finds its way onto the streets of Russia, Central Asia and of Germany. German, American, British, and other NATO troops are in Afghanistan in effect to oversee the world's largest opium plantation.

US policy, announced by Obama Administration Special Envoy to Afghanistan, Richard Holbrooke, a Bilderberg insider since the 1970's, is to leave the Afghan opium farmers untouched, “interdiction not eradication,” he calls it. Holbrooke claims the US does not want to create enemies that the Taliban could recruit. Uhuh...

The truth, as I have written in these pages previously, is that the US under general McChrystal before and Petraeus today, is arming the peasants randomly, using known heroin drug warlords to distribute the guns. The brother of President Karzai, whom the New York Times has identified as being on the CIA payroll, is the acknowledged heroin kingpin of Kandahar Province, the world's largest opium plantation.

Is this why German youth should be asked to potentially sacrifice their lives? Perhaps German Defense Minister Karl-Theodor Freiherr von und zu Guttenberg ought to look into this aspect of the German Afghan mission a bit more. His wife, the former Stephanie Gräfin von Bismarck-Schönhausen, could even extend her campaign against youth pornography to drugs and speak out about this scandal. It would do honor to the tradition of the Iron Chancellor.

In any case the real mission of NATO in Afghanistan is being buried deep. It is perhaps time to unbury it and bring an open debate about the true nature of the US mission in Afghanistan. And no, former Bundespräsident, Koehler, the German military presence in Afghanistan is not merely about the responsibilities of a modern trading nation. It is about a geopolitical agenda that was made in the Pentagon and which, if dutifully followed by European nations and the rest of the world, will lead ultimately to disaster.

ASPARTAME - The Hidden Poison

By Nathan Nicholl

Aspartame: The Pentagon listed it as a biochemical warfare agent, and the FDA and ELFA gave its approval as a sweetener used in over 10,000 foods.

Aspartame is a genetically modified artificial sweetener found in a wide variety of foods. It causes massive cancerous tumours and is without question a chemical which is detrimental to our health. There have been numerous studies examining the effects of aspartame on rats and almost all have revealed that after ingesting aspartame in their drinking water over 60% of these rats developed malignant cancerous tumours. So why are we eating this poison? If there are studies outlining the horrific side effects of aspartame then why haven't governments around the world banned it?

To begin with, aspartame is a neuro excite toxin that makes brain cells literally excite themselves to death. The dangers of aspartame poisoning has been a well guarded secret since the 1980s. The research and history of aspartame is conclusive as a cause of illness and they have also found that it results in toxic reactions in the human body. For example, in an independent double-blind study of aspartame in children with generalized absence epilepsy, Camfield showed that a single dose of 40 mg/kg of aspartame mixed in liquid exacerbated EEG spike-wave discharge. This clearly shows that aspartame is a dangerous chemical food additive, and its use during pregnancy and by children is one of the greatest modern tragedies of all.

One of the many reasons you haven't heard about aspartame poisoning before is because the diet industry is worth trillions of dollars to corporations. They also want to protect their profits by keeping the truth behind aspartame's dangers hidden from the public and who helps them do this? The answer is the money manipulated media. When NutraSweet® was introduced for the 'second' time in 1981, a diet craze revolutionized. Europe and America's eating protocols and a well-oiled money machine was set into motion changing modern lifestyles. The world is now waking up to the fact that practically all drugs and food additives are approved by the FDA 'not because science shows they are safe but because companies essentially lobby the FDA with monetary payoffs and complete the agency's multi-million dollar approval process.'

After more than twenty years of aspartame use, the number of its victims is rapidly piling up and people are figuring out for themselves that aspartame is at the root of their health problems. Patients are teaching their doctors about this nutritional peril and they are healing themselves with little to no support from traditional medicine.

It has been found that aspartame accounts for over 75 percent of the adverse reactions to food additives reported to the EFLA and FDA. Many of these reactions are very serious including seizures and death. However, a few of the 90 different documented symptoms listed in the report as being caused by aspartame include: Headaches/migraines, dizziness, seizures, nausea, numbness, muscle spasms, weight gain, rashes, depression, fatigue, irritability, tachycardia, insomnia, vision problems, hearing loss, heart palpitations, breathing difficulties, anxiety attacks, slurred speech, loss of taste, tinnitus, vertigo, memory loss, and joint pain. According to researchers and physicians studying the adverse effects of aspartame, the following chronic illnesses can be triggered or worsened by ingesting of aspartame: brain tumours, multiple sclerosis, epilepsy, chronic fatigue syndrome, Parkinson's disease, Alzheimer's, mental retardation, lymphoma, birth defects, fibromyalgia, and diabetes.

In June of 1996 the FDA quietly told the manufacturers (without telling the press or the people) that all restrictions were being lifted such that aspartame could be used just like sugar... even in heated and baked goods where the higher temperatures hastened the breakdown into around a dozen other substances. The two worst substance breakdowns of aspartame are methanol into formaldehyde (a toxic poison and known carcinogen)... and phenylalanine into diketopiperazine (DKP)... a known tumour agent.

You must now consider anything advertised as "sugar free" or "zero calorie" as suspect. Another perhaps equally poorly tested sweetener is acesulfame- k which is often teamed with aspartame. If the manufacturer is honest, and complies with the FDA mandate (many don't, with total impunity), there should be a warning "PHENYLKETONURICS: Contains phenylalanine". However, look over Bayer's new Cherry Alka-seltzer and you will find nothing on those huge double-wafer packets. It is on the box, or at the end of an informational insert that few people ever read. Shoney's restaurant has aspartame in their apple pie where the natural tartness masks the formaldehyde. When asked why they no longer used it in their strawberry and other pies their answer was simple and telling: "because they didn't sell well".

Phenylalanine - Aspartame

Phenylalanine is also a hidden danger to anyone consuming aspartame. Most consumers don't know that too much Phenylalanine is a neurotoxin and excites the neurons in the brain to the point of cellular death. ADD/ADHD, emotional and behavioural disorders can all be triggered by too much Phenylalanine in the daily diet. If you are one in ten thousand people who are PKU or carry the PKU gene, Phenylalanine can cause irreversible brain damage and death, especially when used in high quantities or during pregnancy. Phenylalanine is 50% of aspartame, and to the degree humans consume diet products, Phenylalanine levels are reaching a dangerous peak.

Other names for aspartame are NutraSweet, Aminosweet and at present it is horrifically being marketed as a 'natural sweetener'.

Despite the myriad of evidence gained over the years showing that aspartame is a dangerous toxin, it has remained on the global market with the exception of a few countries that have banned it. In fact, it continued to gain approval for use in new types of food despite evidence showing that it causes neurological brain damage, cancerous tumours, and endocrine disruption, among other things.

This is just a short overview of the dangerous impact that aspartame has on our everyday lives. This poison is been marketed towards more and more children and many people don't even know it. People once said nicotine wasn't bad for you and now it's the biggest killer. How can you trust people feeding you with this false information? We need to be more vigilant in what we eat in order to save ourselves and future generations. # The Official Story of 911 is Impossible

■ Paul - WeAreChange.ie

"It is an old maxim of mine that when you have excluded the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth." - Sherlock Holmes in "The Beryl Coronet"

When something is impossible it cannot happen. People can believe it happened, but belief does not trump impossible, no matter how many people believe or how convinced they might be. Impossible is impossible.

The ninth anniversary of the attacks on the World Trade Centre occurred last year. To mark the occasion We Are Change Eire hosted a free screening of 'Loose Change - An American Coup' at Seomra Spraoi in Dublin and did some street action in Dublin City centre on the Friday and Saturday before the screening. The videos of this are available in the longer version of this article on www.WeAreChange.ie/911. The screening room was full and we were very happy with the turnout. All the time new people are coming across this information and are brave enough to assault their world view and belief system with the uncomfortable thought that they may have been enormously fooled about an incredibly important event.

This is one real big inconvenient truth. We have been enormously fooled. We have been sold the biggest pup one can imagine with this event.

There is an enormous body of material now readily available for anyone to look into 911 and see what really occurred. Those who follow it up start off on a long and, let's be honest, traumatic, journey of discovery which involves the shedding of many, just about all, old belief systems and ideas enabling them to see how the real world works and not how the world put before us by the mainstream media and politicians works at all.

September 11th 2001 is a massive subject, and there are so many areas where the official story and the evidence do not match, that to begin to explain ones doubts to someone who believes the official story is quite difficult.

For the benefit of people who do not think 911 was an inside job we will concentrate on just two or three impossible things here and briefly explain why the official story cannot be correct.

Impossible Point Number 1: Fires destroying steel framed buildings.

~1510°C = melting point of typical structural steel
~825°C = maximum temperature of hydrocarbon fires burning in the atmosphere without pressurization or pre-heating (premixed fuel and air - blue flame)
1510 - 825 = 685.
There is a 685 degree C difference between the maximum possible temperature of the fires in the WTC and the melting point of steel. These fires did not melt steel; that is impossible. If hydrocarbon fires melted steel would the cooker in your kitchen work? When you leave a saucepan on your camp fire while you wrestle with your tent does the saucepan melt?

There was molten iron found in the rubble of the towers.
1535°C (2795°F) = melting point of iron. 1535 - 825 = 710. There is a 710 degree C difference between the maximum temperature possible in the fires in the WTC and the melting point of iron. These fires did not melt iron, that is impossible.

It is also impossible because there was no iron in the WTC, it was made from steel.

Impossible Point Number 2.
The fires softened the steel, causing collapse.
The fires started due to the aircraft impacts. The aircraft impacts were on one side of each building, roughly, and were asymmetric. The fuel from the aircraft mostly burnt off in the initial explosion. The remainder started the building fires, which spread, asymmetrically, up the buildings.

Structural steel is thick. Steel framed buildings contain a lot of it and are effectively massive heat sinks. It takes a lot of heat to heat a lot of steel. The steel would require a LOT of heat energy to be transferred into it, over a considerable period of time, to raise its temperature. For a softening of steel to occur which could even theoretically result in a total failure of the building at a certain level would require that entire level to be evenly and symmetrically heated over its entire area at the same rate for a prolonged period of time, to bring all the structural steel to the same temperature at the same time. With an uneven, cool, short fire as was present in the towers these conditions could not exist. Fires softening the steel and thus causing collapse is impossible.

If it was possible and a softening did occur then the level where the softening occurs might collapse. If it did it would go where? Below it is the completely undamaged lower portion of the building, not on fire, not melting, not softening, not anything different to how it always had been, holding up the upper portion. The upper portion cannot move through the lower portion, because the lower portion is in the way. It cannot move sideways because there is no force to move it sideways. It cannot go anywhere. Directly under each column, vertically, the direction the structure moved in, is the rest of that column, undamaged. How can the upper section move past the lower section? This is impossible. Anyone who thinks an aluminium aircraft colliding with an immense structure such as this, at 50 miles an hour or 500 miles an hour, whatever, would cause this structure to completely disintegrate and turn to dust needs to think again. If one of the world trade centre towers, 200,000 tonnes of steel and concrete, was travelling at 500 mph and collided with a stationary Boeing 757, constructed of 70 tonnes of aluminium, which structure would be destroyed? The tower?

Impossible Point Number 3: Fire softening steel, in general.

Steel is softened, in industry, by use of gas torches or very expensive furnaces. If all it took to soften steel was to pour some petrol on it and set it on fire, or throw it on a bonfire, then there would not be such a thing as expensive furnaces, and all the people from the industrial revolution to the present day who used furnaces to soften structural steel, including people such as Brunell, would look very foolish. As it is, it is us who look foolish, for not stopping in our tracks the minute we were told fire melts steel and saying: Hold on! I don't care what everyone says, the facts are the facts! Hydrocarbon fires burning in the atmosphere can't burn hot enough to affect steel. Fact.

The REAL Impossible Point: The official story is impossible.

The official story therefore cannot be true, no matter how often it is repeated, and no matter how convinced one might be that it must be true.

These buildings didn't even 'collapse' anyway, they turned to dust in mid air and flowed to the ground. On the ground after a building collapse one finds pieces of the building; concrete, floors, and steel. With the WTC the concrete floors were not there after the 'collapse', instead lower Manhattan was blanketed with dust of the consistency of talcum powder. Concrete is hard. To turn it to dust requires a lot of energy, it must be crushed, or blown up. The only energy applied to the WTC buildings were the aircraft impacts and some fires. The aircraft impacts did not convert the floors to dust and neither did the fires. So the 'pancake collapse' must have. But the 'pancake collapse' is impossible, and even if it were possible the kinetic energy of the fall could also not have converted the concrete floors to dust. So what did then?

One version of events neatly explains both the 'collapses' and the dust. The buildings were blown to smithereens. This version of events is supported by the peer reviewed findings of Steven Jones and Neils Harrit et al that the dust contained thermite, a military grade explosive.

A THIRD BUILDING?

All this is without mentioning the third building, WTC7. This 47 story steel framed building also fell on September 11th. The argument that it fell due to impact damage doesn't apply since it was not struck by an aircraft, and collapse due to fire is impossible since it was a steel framed building. So what happened to Building 7 then? It fell straight down, into a pile of steel and dust, in six seconds. How?

'The great enemy of the truth is very often not the lie--deliberate, contrived, and dishonest--but the myth--persistent, persuasive, and unrealistic'. -John F. Kennedy

During our street action on 911 one member of the public, who did not agree that 911 was an inside job, made the following statement - '911 can't have been an inside job, people would know by now'. The person telling him obviously knew, but the man could not entertain the notion because 'People would know'. This is how much of a head melter this event has become. Who, specifically, has to be the person who knows and is telling the person who doesn't know for the statement to be valid? Does it have to be everyone? How can it be everyone, since people would need to find out one by one?

Or is it when the news media eventually tell us? Will they tell us? How did we come to believe the official version of this event? From the news media? What they report is true isn't it? What about this report, from the BBC on 911, reporting the collapse of WTC 7. They reported that it collapsed 20 minutes before it did.

This is impossible!

To anyone who does not know that 911 is a lie: Its a lie. People know. Millions of people know. They are trying to tell you, because this is important. It's very difficult to explain just how important this is. As Morpheus says, you need to see it for yourself.

GLOBAL AGENDA

This event changed our world, OUR world, massively for the worse. We are at war, we have a global security/police state being constructed at lightening pace all around us, and we have the terrorist bogey men used to scare us into accepting it all. Watch out! Osama Bin Laden is going to get you! He's coming to kill you because you are free! Hand us over total control of your lives and you will be safe! DO IT NOW!

On top of that we have a lot more. We have firstly, for this author at least, the shattering realisation that we have been fooled and that the ones doing the fooling are the ones we trusted, the media, and the governments. Maybe we didn't completely trust them, but we didn't think a deception of this magnitude could be possible. However, we were incorrect. And that is shocking. To be fooled so badly. It then makes one wonder what else we might be being fooled about. Then we get to the position of seeing why this is important, because when you adjust your world view to take into account that 911 is a lie then the focus becomes a lot clearer. You suddenly see the real picture, like the image that comes into focus in one of those magic pictures. Things begin to make sense, you begin to see how this world is really run, who is doing the running, and where its running to.

911 is a lie. The War on Terror is a lie. Osama Bin Laden, as told to us, is a lie. The War in Iraq, and the war in Afghanistan are because of these lies and all we are going to get in our lives until we expose 911 and the incredible raft of high crimes committed by those responsible is more and more and more of the same lies, only exponentially worse and worse, because by getting to the truth of 911 one realises that ALL wars are frauds and make no mistake people, there is another war in the post. Iran.

You heard Tony Blair himself say it on RTE's 'The Late Late Show'. We are headed into another war and it will be another illegal and despicable war based on ridiculous bullshit and media propaganda. 911 was a false flag attack. Attack yourself, blame your enemy, and attack your enemy. Afghanistan didn't attack America; neither did Iraq and neither will Iran.

The truth of what happened on 911 is extremely complicated. We do not know for sure what exactly happened, but working together people all over the world are getting to the bottom of it and trying to stop this runaway train of crime and killing and theft which has become our reality since 911 and which is justified in large part by 911. There is inertia in the mind of the public at large which cannot mentally accept that such a massive event could be a lie, but that is rapidly changing as people all over the world are increasingly seeing through this veneer of deception.

We hope that if you are one of those people who still believe the official story that this information has caused you to consider what happened on that day again. A great awakening is underway. The lies and deception which enable a small few evil people to steer our world need to stop now. 911 truth is essential to that happening.

Who REALLY did the London bombings on 7/7/2005?

■ John Anthony Hill

Many millions of people world-wide, including national government ministers, former ministers and intelligence-operatives, demolition-experts, pilots, civil-engineers and architects from many different countries, are well-aware of the fact that the attacks in America on September 11th 2001 (now known simply as 911) were an inside-job, with pre-planted nano-thermite explosives in the three WTC buildings (WTC 1, 2 & 7) that were brought down by controlled demolition and that there were no Muslim hijackers at all, but are unaware that the same applies to the 7/7 bombings in London.

This article seeks to address the situation and remedy that lack of awareness, by pointing out some of the facts of what really happened on 7/7/2005.

There were NO suicide-bombers involved in causing the explosions in London on 7/7/2005, because none of the four alleged-bombers were on the tube-trains that blew-up. The bombs were pre-planted, fastened under the floors of the tube-trains, according to eye-witnesses, and as evidenced by the damage caused mostly to people's lower body-parts when the carriage-floors blew and bent upwards, lifting the carriages up and derailling them. Glass from the windows was blown inwards, into the carriages not outwards, as would have been the case if the bombs had been inside the carriages.

So, if there were no Muslim suicide-bombers involved, who really did the bombings?

After extensive investigation, it has been established, that the British government and controlled mainstream-media have told the public a pack of lies/government-propaganda about four young Muslim patsies who were also murdered that day to silence them. Why have the authorities told all these lies and repeated them incessantly, as a hypnotic-mantra to brainwash the people into believing their lies? It is a commonly known fact that criminals who tell lies usually do so to cover up their own crimes. Adolf Hitler said that if you tell a lie, especially a big or monstrous one, and repeat it continually, for long enough, people will believe it.

"Make the lie big, make it simple, keep saying it, and eventually they will believe it".

"All propaganda has to be popular and has to accommodate itself to the comprehension of the least intelligent of those whom it seeks to reach."

"How fortunate for leaders that men do not think." - Adolf Hitler
(German Chancellor, leader of the Nazi party, 1889-1945)

T.H.E.Y. (The Hierarchy Enslaving You) also rely on the fact that people who do not think, either because they don't want to or are afraid to believe, that their own government does such evil things to its own people. As J. Edgar Hoover put it;

"The individual is handicapped by coming face-to-face with a conspiracy so monstrous he cannot believe it exists."

SOME OF THE LIES THAT THEY HAVE TOLD TO US ABOUT THE 7/7 BOMBINGS ARE AS FOLLOWS:-

- 1) The four young Muslims caught the 07:40 AM train from Luton to London.
- 2) They caught the 07:25 AM train from Luton to London Thameslink Station.
- 3) The fabricated photo of the four men outside Luton Station at 07:21:54 AM.
- 4) The explosives that were used were home-made TAPT, made in a bath-tub in Leeds and we were shown photos of the house, bath-tub and utensils.
- 5) Richard Jones' many lies about the Tavistock Square bus-bomb.
- 6) Benjamin Netanyahu's lie that he was forewarned by Scotland Yard.
- 7) Mohammed Sidique Khan's ID was found in three of the four blast locations.

PROOF THAT THEY ARE LIES:-

- 1) The 07:40 AM train and the one after it were both cancelled that day.
- 2) The train that left at 07:25 AM was delayed en-route, and, even if they had managed to catch it, they still could not have caught the tubes that blew-up.
- 3) Many people have done analysis of this Luton Station photograph, and posted them on YouTube, confirming that it was fabricated.
- 4) The explosives were not home-made TAPT, but military-grade high-explosives, as confirmed by Superintendent Christophe Chaboud, head of the French security service's Anti-Terrorism Co-ordination Unit, who flew to London to help with the inquiry, and a day later was reported to have said that the explosives used were "military in origin". He also mentioned that they were possibly trafficked from the Balkans, since it would generally be quite difficult to obtain military explosives, unless the men had "someone on the inside" to get them out of the military establishment. Superintendent Christophe Chaboud, also said: "The use of military explosives is very worrying. We are more used to seeing home-made explosives (like TAPT) made from chemicals. How did they procure them?" TAPT explodes without generating flames or heat, so could not have been the explosive used, because people were badly burned in the explosions. Remember the famous photo of the woman in the white burns face-mask?
- 5) The many conflicting statements that he made that prove Richard Jones lied about everything.
- 6) Scotland Yard denied warning Benjamin Netanyahu. The head of Israeli Mossad General Meir Dagan later admitted that they warned Netanyahu, at 08.40 AM, on 7/7/2005, ten minutes before the bombs went off, proving that they had foreknowledge of the plan, as only those involved in the planning of it could have.
- 7) It was impossible for Mohammed Sidique Khan to have been at any two, never mind three blast-locations, proving that these documents were planted there, not found there.

When you establish that evidence has been fabricated and planted by the authorities, you then have to disbelieve everything they tell you, because that is the only safe position to hold. Similarly, in a proper Court of Law; unlike trial by mainstream media; if it is proven that evidence has been fabricated, and/or planted, the case would be thrown out of court and the perpetrators arrested. So that is what YOU need to do with the official story and the authorities that have perpetrated these crimes.

Mainstream media reports from that day state that at least three of the "suicide-bombers" were shot dead by the authorities in Canary Wharf later that same morning. So, how could suicide-bombers; who were reported to have already blown themselves up on the tube-trains; be alive and in Canary Wharf later that morning, unless they were not suicide-bombers, but patsies, and not on those trains?

So, as the alleged suicide-bombers were not on the tube-trains that blew-up and were shot dead in Canary Wharf later that morning and evidence has been fabricated and planted; who did carry-out the bombings that killed and injured all those innocent people?

WHO GAINS?

The question that needs to be asked in any situation like this is: "Qui bono?" – literally "Who gains?"

The people who gained from it certainly were not Muslims, but rather the people who wanted to keep the British troops fighting against the Muslims in the Middle-East, which immediately brings to mind the military-industrial complex, oil companies and the Israelis.

Who had the motive, expertise and opportunity to carry-out these crimes, fabricate and plant evidence and cover it up? Only the government and controlled mainstream media and Israelis, as explained in the film "7/7 Ripple Effect" that is freely available on the Internet at: <http://JforJustice.co.uk/77> and <http://mtrial.org>

Another film about 7/7 that should be of special interest to the Irish people is "Ludicrous Diversion".

The films go into minute detail about the facts of what happened that day quoting from mainstream media articles and TV-coverage that was reported on the day; before the censors had time to stop them.

Having carefully studied the evidence for five years and having demolished the official conspiracy theory, because that's what the official story is – a conspiracy theory - as well as being a pack of lies, the only scenario that makes sense, and fits all of the evidence, is that the four alleged-bombers were recruited to take part in a mock terrorism drill being run by Peter Power and others, as he stated on TV on the day, that was designed to go live and them to be blown up in the explosions, so they could not tell anyone what really happened. As the train they were supposed to catch was cancelled that day and so they were not blown up on the tube-trains as planned; but realized they were patsies who would be wrongly blamed or murdered; they went to Canary Wharf to tell their story to the mainstream media, but were intercepted and murdered there.

Please watch the film "7/7 Ripple Effect" and make up your own mind about who is telling you the truth – the film-maker (me), or the controlled mainstream media.

After watching the film you will hopefully never view the mainstream media in the same trusting light ever again.

The only places you will get the truth; rather than lies and propaganda put out by the mainstream media; are the Internet independent news media and newspapers like this one – "The Sovereign Independent". So, please support these people in their efforts to bring you the truth.

European Arrest Warrant abuses human rights

Behind the PR smokescreen of the virtues this act would have in tackling serious crime such as murder / rape and organised criminals from escaping justice, lies the cold hard truth that thousands of people have realised after being arrested and extradited. This act serves as a tool that abuses the basic principles of human rights.

By focusing on one case - that of John Anthony Hill - it will become clear how this act is used in reality.

John was arrested on February 1st 2009 by Gardai on foot of a European Arrest Warrant issued by Britain, charged with attempting to pervert the course of justice - a crime that carries a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

One would assume he was accused of something serious like threatening a judge / juror or sabotaging evidence in a case, so what was it John did?

He posted a DVD from Ireland of a documentary, "7/7 ripple effect", that was on Youtube, to a British courthouse addressed to the judge and jury foreman.

His High Court case was set for March 19th 2009, after agreeing to watch the DVD before making his judgement, as well as saying he was not sure if it even is a crime in Ireland, Judge J. Pert, on April 2nd 2009, in making his judgement said he felt no need to watch the DVD and ruled to surrender John.

After appealing and getting bail, the Supreme Court case was eventually set for November 11 2010 - this time with John representing himself. It made no difference, as the presiding judge admitted they did not watch the DVD which was a part of the appeal and said that this hearing was not to consider evidence but to consider the European arrest warrant. They ruled in favour of John's extradition.

The Complete Dummy's Guide to EUGENICS

■ Joe Boggs

The title of this article is an oxymoron, a contradiction in terms. In a perfect eugenics utopia, almost all dummies would have been exterminated, all of them except those who have been genetically modified, gender neutralised, and upgraded into a mindless unisex mass of nothingness, to be used as tools in the elite's toolbox. We live in such a utopia, but the elites have not quite upgraded their toolbox yet. The upgrading is, and has always been, called THE NEW WORLD ORDER.

As complete dummies, let us try to get into the infinitely complex mind of a eugenics God. I know, I know, it's impossible for dumb, stupid, brainless, dullards such as us, but let's prove to them just how incredibly dumb we really are and have a really good crack at it.

Eugenics is a big, big religion. I hate to go there, but, if this is about eugenics, then it's about the super-religion of eugenics. The first thing is, eugenicists believe in reincarnation. They reincarnate, we the residual mass, don't. When we die, we just slide back into that slimy primordial soup from whence we came. They, the eugenicists, don't really need to reincarnate into this commoner-infested landfill site called planet earth at all, where all the dullards live, but some of them – the benevolent dictators - choose to. Bless them. As Gods, they are different - a vastly superior species of course than the rest of us stupid animals - who are preventing the natural evolution of this planet/dump by our very presence. It is the divine duty of the eugenicists to jab a good sharp farmer's pitchfork up our rear-ends and thus speed up our eternally sluggish evolutionary development.

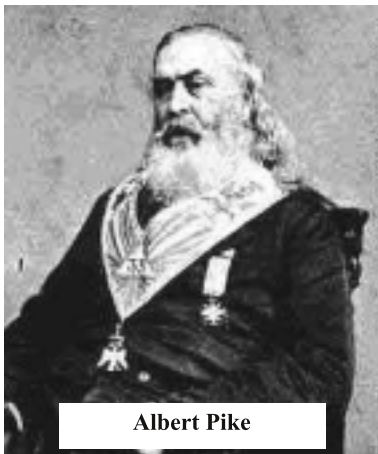

Cattle prods work well, but we have not been stupefied enough to call them cattle prods yet, so they call them tazers, and mobile phones. Eugenics is about the controlled evolution of the planet and everything on it (including us dummies), which was left in an imperfect state. Enter our saviours/controllers, the elite eugenicists, to clean up the mess for us - their poor helpless inferiors.

Eugenics seems to come from Hinduism. You find evidence of this in the works of General Albert Pike –the High Pope of Freemasonry and people like Charles Galton Darwin, the grandson of Charles Darwin. Charles Darwin was the half-cousin of Francis Galton, who coined the term eugenics. That's the thing! Eugenicists all selectively inbreed with each other. They are not stupid enough to fall in love randomly and dilute the godhood of their hereditary gene pool. Actually, their godhead is literally in their trousers, parked next to the family jewels.

However, being illumined they do not allow the lower head to dominate the upper head. Like Hinduism, eugenics is a caste system. Emotion is a silly effeminate weakness to them, and boy! Do they hate women? Women are dispensable, the sooner they are scientifically eliminated, the faster the Eugenics World Order can be established, the unfit exterminated, and the New Man created. The New Man will be a self-fertilising hermaphrodite.

Albert Pike

Women have babies in the old-fashioned way. In the New World Order, babies are all to be decanted from bottles and test tubes in the Brave New Huxlian World way. Women are the scum of the earth. How many woman Gods have there been? Hitler, Pinochet, Mussolini, Castro, Franco, Idi Amin, Stalin, Mao Zedong, Pol Pot, Saddam Hussein, Mugabe; how many of these were women? How many kings or emperors were women? No! That scrawny effeminate queen or empress is an unavoidable evil; a temporary machine in a hereditary baby factory doing the job those proper male scientists should be doing properly. The sooner that machine is scrapped and the system is upgraded the better. For now, feed them feminism, and any thing else that sterilises them and distracts them from the mothering instinct. The elites must depopulate the lower common breeding stock.

Question: Have the High Priests of eugenics throughout history, always been, violent, god-complex, racist, jealous of the baby-making process, psychopathic, egotistical, control freaks, heterophobic, and maybe perhaps just a tad homosexual.....NAW!

Ah but! What about the all the New Age Mother Earth Goddess Religions, that are springing up like mushrooms all over the place? I wasn't going to go into religion but this is a frequently asked question. The eugenicists set the New Age up to drug the enemy, and to make the males effeminate and to turn them into flower children. Its better they smile girly smiles, share group hugs and put flowers in the barrels of the soldiers' guns than blow off the top of the soldiers' heads with a blunderbuss.

Alistair Crowley was a Masonic MI6 agent and that was his job, starting pick-and-mix global New Age religion franchises. He was just one trained to seed them, his bookshelves very well stocked with cheap glossy gobbledybooks to suit every taste.

There's one thing missing in them all though, a thing called God. Now if you are God, you can't have false Gods before you, can you? So! You slide society into a pick-and-mix of New Age religions including atheism. Anything goes, so long as there is no God in it. The old religions, stripped of all their magic, were, somewhat scientific. In science, if you keep doing the same thing over, and over and you keep getting the same consequences, that becomes a law.

Alistair Crowley

The old religions were about morals. Break the moral codes and you get the same consequences whatever the religion, or lack of it. "You reap what you sow", "what goes around comes around" etc. springs to mind. Now the eugenicists, being staunch sadists, know this, and try in every possible way to make you break the moral codes, (this used to be called sin) and suffer the consequences. In the New World Order, there will be a God all right, a physical God, and being God, he'll be doing whatever he likes to you, if he has allowed you to be born in the first place that is.

Here's a couple of religious Green eugenics depopulation New Age earth savers for you:

"When we're finished, you'll wish you had the rights of a tree."

~ Maurice Strong on the Earth Charter view on human rights~

"No one will enter the New World Order unless he or she will make a pledge to worship Lucifer. No one will enter the New Age unless he will take a Luciferian Initiation."

~David Spangler, Director of Planetary Initiative, United Nations~

Astrology though, has an exoteric and an esoteric meaning. The mush you read in the stupid papers and magazines has been especially designed for dullards. That's the exoteric part. Astrology comes from the eugenics religion. The esoteric part is a New World Order business plan written in a calendar, dates pencilled in a diary so to speak; only the diary is a huge reliable stellar clock ticking away around the heavenly firmament overhead. The Age of Pisces, the fish was the age when the bright sparks would be "fished out" of the genetic pool of life.

Now we are entering Aquarius, we, the junk genes are to be poured out of the pitcher...exterminated, so that the Gods can build the next stage of their utopia and create the New Man using science. Now the wash-of-stars are just that. You can join them any way you want, but they called them the signs of the zodiac and surrounded the scam with hocus-pocus, but all it is, is a long-term business plan.

Who educates the eugenicists? Well first, they learn of their superiority from their parents who learned it from their parents who learned it from their parents. They are groomed from birth. They also learn that their divine role in life is to dominate the planet as it should be dominated...by them and that the proof of their godhood lies in the fact that they own the global financial system, to which all of us dullards are slaves, kept in our rightful place. We could not survive a day without them. We are simply too stupid. "Let him who will be deceived" is a maxim in law, and the society in which we live is the Law Society, their Law Society. Eugenics is a religion of deception.

However psychopathic it may sound to a dullard, (after all, we are dullards) you have to hand it to them. Just because you think they're psychopathic doesn't mean they're not cunning and clever. A God creates things out of nothing, and they ARE genetically modifying us daily, sterilising us, turning us into eunuchs, reducing our IQ, debasing us through 'entertainment' and the propaganda called "education".

Genetic modification is just that, changing something. It's not creating something out of nothing. Only a God can do that, but consider this, what about money? Money doesn't exist. They said "so mote it be", "let it be", "Amen", or whatever they utter in the secret chambers of eugenics temples, and whoosh! Everyone is a slave to something that doesn't exist, except in that headspace that created it. Government is another creation-out-of-nothing. Someone dreamed it up and we believe it is something. Pretty Godlie, is it not?

Another thing eugenicists are obsessed with is immortality. No! Not in the hereafter... in the here-here. We are the spare parts department. Being Gods, they want to live forever in the physical body. This goes all the way back to the pharaohs of Egypt and beyond...mummification etc. Obviously, there isn't going to be room for everyone in such a utopia. That might also lead to jealousy. Depopulation through mass-murder, infanticide, and forced sterilisation is a better option.

The Eugenics 10 Commandments are written in tablets of stone on the Georgia Guidestones for all dullards to read, that's if you are still alive and can still read and write and count beyond your 10 fingers. Do include the finger you are using to do the counting, fellow dullards. Otherwise, it will cause you confusion. A eugenics God has no sense of humour, by the way, so watch out!

"That's it children! Next lesson we will be looking at some of the works of some of our most respected eugenicists from history, and the Green Eugenicists who dominate every aspect of our lesser lives today."

"Pay attention Julian Huxley. Sit up straight in your seat! Stop swinging backwards on your chair! What do you think this is a holiday camp? HAVE YOU NO BREEDING?"

The Georgia Guidestones

What Are Chemtrails For? It Depends Who You Ask

■ Clare Swinney

Chemtrails are substances sprayed from devices attached to aircraft into the upper atmosphere. They differ from the condensation trails sometimes seen emanating from planes in a number of ways, including that they often linger in the sky for more than half-an-hour and can fill an otherwise clear-blue sky with an unnatural-looking cloud cover within which the tell-tale signs of electromagnetic gravity waves frequently emerge.

While politicians typically tend to elude the issue of chemtrails or erroneously claim that they don't exist, there is a mountain of information available about them on the Internet to show that they do. Indeed, at the time of writing there were about 1,730,000 entries at Google under 'chemtrail,' 160,000 entries under 'YouTube chemtrail,' with videos of the ominous lines in the sky from around the world, numerous official documents related to their use and a wide variety of opinions regarding what they are used for. This article will focus on the latter.

According to the official line, the spraying of chemtrails into the atmosphere, which is referred to as geo-engineering by the mainstream media and academics, is being inflicted upon the planet to save us from "man-made global warming." As many readers already are aware this geoengineering Emperor has no clothes, as "man-made global warming" has been exposed as a scam, thus leaving us to speculate as to why this audacious assault on Mother Earth ever began.

Respected New World Order researcher, Freeman of The Freeman Perspective, said during the Truth Frequency radio show on August the 29th 2010, he had identified two main functions for the chemtrail program on the basis of their main ingredients: aluminium and barium. He suggests that with aluminium in your system, you become a receptor for the electromagnetic frequency devices being used, such as the High Frequency Active Auroral Research Program, (H.A.A.R.P.) and the European Incoherent Scatter Scientific Association technology and if you breathe in barium, you'll shine like a beacon on the X-band radar, making it easy for those using this technology to know when people gather. In support of this theory, he said it was openly admitted during the first Gulf War that barium was being fed to the insurgents, (and one could see chemtrails were used to feed it to them), as this enabled them to be tracked.

He also contends chemtrails serve other functions, and suggests that when coupled with the electromagnetic frequency devices currently in operation, they bestow those in control of the technology "with the power of Gods." "They can bring on the end of the world, and make it appear so. They can cause earthquakes, floods and all of these things," he warns.

According to highly-respected researcher, Clifford E. Carnicom, who has worked in this field for over 12 years, and who insists on using the word aerosol, rather than chemtrail, those menacing lines in the sky have at least seven functions. These are as follows: environmental modification and control, including weather control; biological operations; electromagnetic operations, including H.A.A.R.P., and cell towers; military applications; planetary and geophysical modification; a global surveillance system, and to detect ionic disturbances from exotic propulsion systems.

For over four years now, Carnicom has focused on a syndrome believed to be caused by fibers which are being introduced into the environment via chemtrails. He published a paper on the topic in June 2010, which went largely unnoticed, although its implications were immense. Titled Morgellons: The Extent of The Problem, it describes the prevalence of this disease and indicated that we may be at the dawn of a global health crisis.

A test called the Red Wine Spit test was given to volunteers, and all those who took part tested positive for the fibers, even though they did not manifest obvious "Morgellons" symptoms, such as the appearance of fibers growing under the skin. Furthermore, he found that the cellular integrity of red blood cells is being damaged severely and the degree by which the blood is altered, corresponds with the number of filaments present in the body and skin.

The authorities have been informed of this and are turning a blind eye to it, so the ball is in our court Carnicom told Jeff Rense on the Rense.com radio show in June.

According to American journalist and filmmaker, Michael Murphy, the chemtrail program could be an attempt to kill off anything that is natural and organic. Murphy, with Paul Wittenberger and G. Edward Griffin, recently completed a highly-spoken of documentary about chemtrails, titled: What In The World Are They Spraying?. They did research for the film at Mount Shasta in California, where a group of concerned citizens has been closely monitoring environmental changes attributable to chemtrails over the last 4-5 years. Evidence indicates that the area is heading for eco-collapse. The snow at Mount Shasta had 61,100 parts per billion (ppb) of aluminium in it, when it should have been at a level of about 7 ppb. Plus, there is so much metal falling, that the pH in forests has changed from acidic, (5.5) to neutral, (7.0), and trees are dying. Furthermore, in four years, salmon spawning has crashed in a local tributary from 160,000 to 8,000, about 80% of amphibious species have died off and the potato harvest has declined by 80%.

Murphy, who runs the TruthMediaProductions website, believes it's more than a coincidence that genetically-modified aluminium-resistant seeds have been developed by Monsanto. It may be that the environment is being poisoned deliberately to enable corporations to make money and gain more control over the world's food supply.

Whistleblower, Dr Bill Deagle, a medical doctor who worked for the New World Order, who currently captains the Nutrimeal.com website, refers to geoengineering as, "Aerosol Armageddon." He said during his radio show on January the 5th that the aerosolization of the earth is to geoengineer the climate, so it can't support life. "They have turned the atmosphere into a plasma, so they can pump and drive frequencies that can affect life forms, thought patterns, biological systems on the ground level and even use it as a weapon to kill people, [and] change people's ability to function. This is very nasty and people need to understand that the atmosphere of the earth has been turned into a weapon against the planet," he said.

Andrew Bridgman, the head of the Southern California Office of the Agriculture Defense Coalition, like Carnicom, hastily shuns the use of the term chemtrail. "It's an antiquated label for geo-engineering," he asserts. It's important to use the same terminology as academics, politicians and the media, in order to be effective in engaging them he says.

"So does this scare you that people want to mess with the Earth as a whole? It should, because the compounds being presented for geo-engineering, such as sulfates are used, yet they never discuss the others, in particular, the use of aluminum," he offers. The obfuscation they engage in and the false claims the top geo-engineers make, are indicators they have something highly questionable to hide he says.

Professor Alan Robock claimed recently that there is no way to get the aerosols into the stratosphere. "All you need do is watch planes spraying particulates into the atmosphere to know Robock is lying," says Bridgman. Similarly, Professor David Keith said during a conference in February: "We haven't done anything serious [research-wise] on aluminium, so there could be something terrible that we will find tomorrow that we haven't we looked at." Again, there is evidence to show that the research has been done.

What alarms Bridgman the most is that there is no regulation of this activity. The door is unlocked for anybody to go up in a plane and dump whatever they want to, while governmental systems have been designed not to respond to geo-engineering issues. "Geo-engineering is not regulated and it must be, now!," he says. Thus, it is apparent that, we the people, need to take action. We need to educate others, and we must make every effort to get the issue into the media and in front of our politicians.

Ever wondered why, when a Google search is conducted for anything involving global conspiracies of any sort, the first search result that is invariably displayed in your browser is a Wikipedia page debunking this information as mere conspiracy theory? We are frustrated by the fact that, rather than just taking our word for it, when suggesting to people to perform a Google search to research this information themselves, they often choose the Wikipedia page as a source to answer their questions, and are subsequently discouraged from conducting further investigation? This is no mere accident!

Upon my own investigations I have found that Wikipedia has been pretty much infiltrated and controlled by, among other entities, Green party activists from the UK. Many of the posts and articles formerly submitted have been rewritten to reflect the desired official consensus for many of these global issues particularly the global warming hoax.

Please spread this information far and wide, for while Wikipedia sneak their deceptive information into the top of the Google search result page, many who we direct to Google will be ensnared by Wikipedia before they have a chance to research the real stuff that is documented, verified and sourced.

Please read the excellent article below by Lawrence Solomon who is author of The Deniers: The world-renowned scientists who stood up against global warming hysteria, political persecution, and fraud.

How Wikipedia's green doctor rewrote 5,428 climate articles

By Lawrence Solomon

The Climategate Emails describe how a small band of climatologists cooked the books to make the last century seem dangerously warm.

The emails also describe how the band plotted to rewrite history as well as science, particularly by eliminating the Medieval Warm Period, a 400 year period that began around 1000 AD.

The Climategate Emails reveal something else, too: the enlistment of the most widely read source of information in the world — Wikipedia — in the wholesale rewriting of this history.

The Medieval Warm Period, which followed the meanness and cold of the Dark Ages, was a great time in human history — it allowed humans around the world to bask in a glorious warmth that vastly improved agriculture, increased life spans and otherwise bettered the human condition.

But the Medieval Warm Period was not so great for some humans in our own time — the same small band that believes the planet has now entered an unprecedented and dangerous warm period. As we now know from the Climategate Emails, this band saw the Medieval Warm Period as an enormous obstacle in their mission of spreading the word about global warming. If temperatures were warmer 1,000 years ago than today, the Climategate Emails explain in detail, their message that we now live in the warmest of all possible times would be undermined. As put by one band member, a Briton named Folland at the Hadley Centre, a Medieval Warm Period “dilutes the message rather significantly.”

Even before the Climategate Emails came to light, the problem posed by the Medieval Warm Period to this band was known. “We have to get rid of the Medieval Warm Period” read a pre-Climategate email, circa 1995, as attested to at hearings of the U.S. Senate Committee on Environment & Public Works. But the Climategate transcripts were more extensive and more illuminating — they provided an unvarnished look at the struggles that the climate practitioners underwent before settling on their scientific dogma.

The Climategate Emails showed, for example, that some members of the band were uncomfortable with aspects of their work, some even questioning the need to erase the existence of the Medieval Warm Period 1,000 years earlier.

Wikipedia Controlled by Green Party Activists since 2003

Said Briffa, one of their chief practitioners, “I know there is pressure to present a nice tidy story as regards ‘apparent unprecedented warming in a thousand years or more in the proxy data’ but in reality the situation is not quite so simple. ... I believe that the recent warmth was probably matched about 1,000 years ago.”

In the end, Briffa and other members of the band overcame their doubts and settled on their dogma. With the help of the United Nations Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, the highest climate change authority of all, they published what became the icon of their movement — the hockey stick graph. This icon showed temperatures in the last 1,000 years to have been stable — no Medieval Warm Period, not even the Little Ice Age of a few centuries ago.

But the UN’s official verdict that the Medieval Warm Period had not existed did not erase the countless schoolbooks, encyclopaedias, and other scholarly sources that claimed it had. Rewriting those would take decades, time that the band members didn’t have if they were to save the globe from warming.

Instead, the band members turned to their friends in the media and to the blogosphere, creating a website called RealClimate.org. “The idea is that we working climate scientists should have a place where we can mount a rapid response to supposedly ‘bombshell’ papers that are doing the rounds” in aid of “combating disinformation,” one email explained, referring to criticisms of the hockey stick and anything else suggesting that temperatures today were not the hottest in recorded time. One person in the nine-member Realclimate.org team — U.K. scientist and Green Party activist William Connolley — would take on particularly crucial duties.

William Connolley

Connolley took control of all things climate in the most used information source the world has ever known – Wikipedia. Starting in February 2003, just when opposition to the claims of the band members were beginning to gel, Connolley set to work on the Wikipedia site. He rewrote Wikipedia’s articles on global warming, on the greenhouse effect, on the instrumental temperature record, on the urban heat island, on climate models, on global cooling. On Feb. 14, he began to erase the Little Ice Age; on Aug.11, the Medieval Warm Period. In October, he turned his attention to the hockey stick graph. He rewrote articles on the politics of global warming and on the scientists who were sceptical of the band. Richard Lindzen and Fred Singer, two of the world’s most distinguished climate scientists, were among his early targets, followed by others that the band especially hated, such as Willie Soon and Sallie Baliunas of the Harvard-Smithsonian Centre for Astrophysics, authorities on the Medieval Warm Period.

All told, Connolley created or rewrote 5,428 unique Wikipedia articles. His control over Wikipedia was greater still, however, through the role he obtained at Wikipedia as a website administrator, which allowed him to act with virtual impunity. When Connolley didn’t like the subject of a certain article, he removed it — more than 500 articles of various descriptions disappeared at his hand. When he disapproved of the arguments that others were making, he often had them barred — over 2,000 Wikipedia contributors who ran afoul of him found themselves blocked from making further contributions. Acolytes whose writing conformed to Connolley’s global warming views, in contrast, were rewarded with Wikipedia’s blessings. In these ways, Connolley turned Wikipedia into the missionary wing of the global warming movement.

The Medieval Warm Period disappeared, as did criticism of the global warming orthodoxy. With the release of the Climategate Emails, the disappearing trick has been exposed. The glorious Medieval Warm Period will remain in the history books, perhaps with an asterisk to describe how a band of zealots once tried to make it disappear.

Lawrence Solomon is executive director of Energy Probe.

Energy Probe was founded in 1969 as a project of the Pollution Probe Foundation, and soon became one of the country’s most influential voices on energy policy.

Energy Probe was first to recognize that nuclear power was uneconomic, in a report produced in 1974, and has been successful in stopping the construction in Canada of all nuclear plants proposed since then. Energy Probe was also first to recognize — again in 1974 — that market prices were necessary to induce energy conservation, and succeeded in convincing the federal government to let oil prices rise to the World Oil Price.

Energy Probe also helped create the Mackenzie Valley Pipeline Inquiry (the Berger Commission), which led to the scrapping of uneconomic and unenvironmental Arctic pipelines. For achievements such as these, The Canadian Encyclopaedia singled out Energy Probe among environmental groups for being effective in influencing our country’s policies. The Canadian Encyclopaedia added: “despite its low budget, Energy Probe is respected for its scrupulous research.”

Greens By Name
Green By Nature

Gabriel Donohoe <http://foolscrow.wordpress.com>

One dictionary definition of "green" is "naive". The Irish Green Party remains in the minority of naifs who still believe that Global Warming is anthropogenic or man-made.

How can they not know that the pushers of anthropogenic global warming have been found out? It has been shown to be a fraud, a money-making racket for the banksters, and a huge government grab for unnecessary and unmerited taxes. The whole world is now aware that fraudsters like Al Gore, R.K. Pachauri, Prof. Philip Jones and their ilk have been unmasked.

But the Green Party is blind to this 'Inconvenient Truth'. Are they really so dense or have they been bought off or duped by vested interests?

The Irish Government is so hard up for cash that it is considering auctioning off national assets like state lands, buildings, state agencies, and other valuables that belong to the Irish people. The Government says that the money is needed to support economic growth and employment.

When the cash for the sale of these assets is spent, what then?

The State will still have no money and its assets will then be in private hands. The inherent wealth of the citizens of Ireland will have passed to the super-rich, a small class of people who already own most of the wealth of the island. The thrift, travail, and sacrifice of previous generations will be casually tossed aside. What would have been the legacy of future generations of Irishmen and women will now find its way into the bulging pockets of the banksters and the corporatists.

It is like a middle-aged couple selling their house and belongings to finance an extravagant lifestyle and then becoming homeless, leaving no inheritance for their children.

Selling the national assets will only serve to impoverish the Irish people yet further enrich a wealthy elite. It is either an act of criminal stupidity or one of national sabotage. It is criminally stupid because it strips the Irish people of national treasures which have become the foundation of the wealth of the nation while at the same time delivering no enduring gain.

It is national sabotage if the government is doing this merely to further the interests of their exploiter pals in banking and big business. Many national governments have shown themselves to be working not for the people who elected them but for the welfare of a powerful elite who buy politicians with party donations, post-politics employment, consultancy fees, holidays, and other bribes.

The big question is whether the Irish Government is brainless or corrupt. Either way, it is not acting in the interests of the people of the country.

Is there an alternative?

Absolutely! There is an alternative that will allow the Government to raise money without going into debt or paying interest and yet still keep all our national assets.

It is called monetization. Banks and financial institutions do it all the time to increase their capital reserves to enable them to lend (create) more money. If, for example, a bank owns property valued at €10 million it can create and loan, through the Fractional Reserve System, an amount of about €120 million in cash or credits.

A government can do the same. In Ireland, the state owns many billions of euro in property, parks, natural resources, and many other kinds of assets. All it needs to do is monetize only a small fraction of these. Let's say it nominates certain state-owned buildings or land valued at €10 billion: it can then create some €120 billion in credits which it can loan out through a national bank set up for the purpose of creating employment and getting the economy moving again.

The state can thus create €120 billion without going into debt and without having to pay interest to any grasping bankster. This would be of enormous benefit to the welfare of the people and of great financial advantage to the State. Such a bank would enjoy universal confidence as it would be backed by the full faith and credit of the Irish Government and the Irish people.

A state-owned bank would work for the enrichment of all the citizens of Ireland, not just for the few shareholders of private banks. At the moment, private banks create almost all our money, set interest rates, decide whom they will lend to and whom they will not. This allows them to wield tremendous power and gives them the ability to override parliamentary decisions and government policy. In other words, unelected private banks decide national (and international) economic policy and governments are completely subservient to their every diktat. That is the key reason why the entire world is now in utter financial chaos.

But a government owned bank could operate in complete freedom from bankster influence. It could loan money to county councils, municipalities, farmers, fishermen, small businesses, and citizens at low interest rates and it could afford to be patient when times are hard. For example, if a business venture were not profitable or was even making a small loss, a state bank could continue to support it as long as it was providing jobs, bringing in tax revenue to the government, and keeping people off welfare which would be a drain on the exchequer.

Today, viable businesses are going bankrupt by the hundreds, families are losing their homes by the thousands, and workers are losing their jobs in their tens of thousands – all because private banking cartels choose, for selfish corporate reasons, not to lend to the business and private community but to stash their bailout money in 'safer' gilt-edged investments. Banksters have no loyalty whatsoever to the state or its citizens. Their god is Profit, profit at any cost; huge dividends for their shareholders and obscene bonuses for their executives. The people be damned!

But a government bank could change the fortune of the state almost overnight. It could create enough money or generate as much credit as it needed, all without debt or crippling interest. Of course, that's not to suggest that a state bank should throw money at every hare-brained scheme that is put before it. Borrowers would have to have a viable business plan and provide adequate security for the amounts sought. But, as opposed to private banks, a state bank could take more risks and accept lower profits where private banks will not. All profits accruing would go to the national exchequer or be re-invested as bank capital. Also, all government receivables would be lodged in the state bank, thus generating additional funds for future lending.

A state bank would lead us to national prosperity, full employment, improved infrastructure and resources, less national debt, and less taxes and allow us to emerge with renewed vigour and hope from the horrendous mess into which private banks have landed us.

The Government has already missed a huge opportunity to get us on the right road to wealth and prosperity when it threw billions of taxpayers' money into that black hole of criminality known as Anglo Irish Bank whereas a national bank could have created credit of more than €200 billion with the money that has already been squandered and lost forever.

It is plain that government ministers do not have a single innovative, intelligent thought between the whole lot of them, nor is there any sign of original or inventive thinking among the opposition parties who are poised to seize the mantle of government by default.

If this proposal, outlined above, is put before the government, do you think they will implement it?

No, they won't.

Why? Because the banksters would not allow it. It would put them out of business. And we all know by now, after the outrageous bank guarantees, bank recapitalization, the Anglo Irish Bank debacle, the IMF, ECB and NAMA, whom our politicians really work for.

We the people must force change. We must educate and bring forth dynamic new political creatures who will actually work for the good of the people rather than the present crop of scavengers who luxuriate in the laps of the banks and big business. We must boot the incumbents out of office and we must decline to elect their drooling cousins in opposition who are piddling themselves with excitement at the prospect of taking their turn at the trough. Recommend ending the article here. The rest is just the message we're giving out anyway and doesn't have as rich a content as the rest. He may rewrite parts for print format, I'm waiting on a reply back,

Where do we start?

We can start by passing this article on to our friends and associates. We can discuss banking reform at home, at work, in bars and clubs, and in our community centres. We can explore what other reformers are saying by reading their books and pamphlets and by visiting their websites. A good place to start is by reading the following books: "Web of Debt" by Ellen Brown, "The Grip of Death" by Michael Rowbotham, "The Creature From Jekyll Island" by G. Edward Griffin, and "The Lost Science of Money" by Stephen Zarlenga.

Forget about the highly propagandized mainstream media which is controlled by a handful of mega corporations and switch to alternative TV news channels like Russia Today (Sky 512), Al Jazeera (Sky 514), and The Controversial Channel (Sky 201). (The latter seems to have gone off the air recently. Perhaps it was too controversial for the powers that be.) These channels may not give you the whole truth either but at least you will have much more balance in news and current affairs.

You could visit and subscribe to internet news sites like Jim Corr, Alex Jones, Global Research, Dandelion Salad, Sovereign Independent, OpEdNews, The Alliance for Natural Health, and a great host of others. The thing is to get talking and to create a national forum where ideas can be exchanged and critiqued. The ideas posed in this article may be challenged, improved, expanded, adopted, rejected, or whatever. But what is clear is that we MUST instigate banking reform, total reform – not just tweaking the system here and there.

The idea of a National Bank should not be seen as the ultimate goal of monetary reform but as a stepping stone to achieve monetary justice and freedom. Banking is not a proper function of government; nevertheless, government intervention is required right now to clean up the mess that criminal banksters have foisted upon us.

It is, however, the proper function of government to create and issue a nation's money, debt-free and interest-free. Such a course of action would make for a wealthier, happier, country that would break the shackles of the banksters and end a miserable 300 hundred year ordeal of debt slavery.

Abraham Lincoln was on the verge of achieving monetary freedom with his 'greenback' programme which had enabled him to win the Civil War and preserve the union. He intended to continue with the U.S. Treasury issuing debt-free money, removing that power from private banks, but was assassinated only weeks into his second term. Who do you think was behind his murder?

Here is an amazing bankster inspired excerpt from an editorial in the London Times from 1865 which shows how terrified the banksters were of Lincoln and his 'greenback' policy.

"If this mischievous financial policy, which has its origin in North America, shall become endured [sic] down to a fixture, then that Government will furnish its own money without cost. It will pay off debts and be without debt. It will have all the money necessary to carry on its commerce. It will become prosperous without precedent in the history of the world. The brains, and wealth of all countries will go to North America. That country must be destroyed or it will destroy every monarchy on the globe."

An incredible revelation from the London Times!

Listen to what the banksters are telling us, albeit inadvertently. Look what total banking reform will do for us! Ireland – or any country – "can furnish its own money without cost...will pay off debts and be without debt...will have all the money necessary to carry on its commerce...will become prosperous without precedent in the history of the world."

Who wouldn't want that kind of prosperity and contentment for their children and their grandchildren? It is there within our grasp at this very moment. Why don't we go for it? Right now!

The Irish Recovery Plan – Is It Too Late to Default?

■ David Howden - St. Louis University.

Ireland “officially” entered recession over two years ago – September 2008. In the interim period, the country and its citizenry have witnessed one of the most spectacular collapses in modern history. While a series of bailout packages have been introduced over the last two years, it is instructive to see what has been gained, if anything, by such emergency measures.

Two years ago, the Irish Liberty Forum was among the first to broadcast how the bailout funds would not be beneficial. On Oct 9th 2008i, in the aftermath of the ill-fated bank guarantee, Brian Ó Caithnia warned that the guarantee would soon drag the Irish government into a bailout of the entire Irish banking system, followed by its nationalization until the eventual default of the Irish government and the arrival of the IMF. We were laughed at then, who is laughing now.

Two years later the costs of banking rescues have spiraled, and large public sector borrowing has left the country's finances in tatters. External debt now runs at 1,305% of Ireland's GDP, which represents some $535,000 per person. These figures make it the second-most indebted country in the world. With the effectiveness of the past bailouts and loans increasingly scrutinized, one may ask why we keep continuing to throw good after seemingly bad.

At the same time, one may also ask what bailout, if any, Ireland has just received. €85 billion is not small change. It is also not without its own costs. The terms of the bailout loans impose a 5.8% rate on this sum of money. Some observersii, note it would have to be a strange definition of the word “bailout” to think that making a loan at an interest rate that the distressed Celtic borrower was incurring not even 3 months prior amounts to easing Ireland's difficulties.

Indeed, some of the more astute point out that this loan actually increases the chances that Ireland will eventually defaultiii. This seemingly low interest rate of 5.8% is almost assuredly above the growth rate that one can expect to occur in Ireland's immediate future. As Ireland's debt service payments rise faster than their ability to pay, odds (and probably the market's money) are on Ireland facing increasing difficulties servicing this debt. To conceptualize the fractional problem at hand – Ireland's odds of default are analogous to a fraction where the numerator (the debt service of 5.8%) rises significantly faster than the denominator (GNP, or ability to repay this loan, perhaps 1-2% maximum). Ireland's schooling system is still sufficiently effective, I believe, that most school-aged children can read this bailout as a recipe for disaster.

All of this could have been avoided by pursuing the traditional method for dealing with insolvencies – bankruptcy. Ireland could have defaulted two years ago, exited the Eurozone, and tried to rebuild from its evidently collapsed financial and social model. Instead, years of bailouts have prolonged the pain, and worsened the imbalances now all too apparent in the economy. Nobody likes to take their lumps, but getting the inevitable out of the way early allows for an entrepreneurial learning process – the errors of the past are identifiediv, and an unsustainable situation is avoided for the future.

In the comment section to Ó Caithnia's 2008 article, one skeptical observer comments: “There were two countries in dire straits at the time the guarantee was brought in, ourselves and Iceland. One government intervened in the market, one didn't. Which country would you rather be living in right now?” Two years provide an enormous amount of insight to this question.

Two years ago the UK got upset when Iceland decided to let its banking sector default on its obligations (of course, only after it was nationalized – better too late to realize it than never). Icelandic banking debt was 12 times its GDP, an impossible sum for such a small country to repay. Ireland, in contrast, decided to “save” its banking sector by taking on massive public debts.

The Fianna Fail party has been willing to stake its reelection on propping up such an unsustainable system with ever-increasing debt levels.

By the end of 2008, Iceland's entire banking system was decimated and its stock market had fallen more than 95% from its all-time highs of just one year earlier. By allowing its currency, the krona, to devalue (60% again the euro) the government was forced to take austerity measures that other European countries talk loosely about, but lack the moral strength and courage to enact. The decline in the exchange rate opened Icelandic exporters to increasing cost advantages as the crisis worsened.

Ireland, by being tied to the euro and not enacting meaningful fiscal cuts, continued shouldering ever higher amounts of public sector debt. Banking imbalances worsened and innocent Irish citizens – powerless to stop the rush to the abyss – stood helplessly by as Ireland's downward spiral intensified.

What a difference two years make. While Ireland's GDP continues to freefall, Iceland's has stabilized and is showing signs of growth. Real wages have been negative in Ireland since the middle of 2008. After falling sharply over 2008, Icelandic wages have recovered and started showing positive signs of growth in the middle of this year. Inflation in Iceland is also stabilizing, as the devalued krona allows for increased exports and growth in the economy. By taking its lumps early, and severely, Iceland has been able to quickly regain its composure and start the trek back to prosperity. Lord only knows how long Irish people will wait for a similar result.

This is not to say that it is too late for Ireland to following the Icelandic path. A default and exit from the Eurozone and a return to the punt would involve some painful short-term adjustments. It would also allow for two significant beneficial results. First, as trust in the Irish sovereign debt market is negatively affected by such a default the Taoiseach would finally be forced to make austerity cuts that are more than mere lip-service to cutting expenses. Public sector debt would be largely eliminated, and the culprit deficit would be curtailed through the difficulties inherent in borrowing after a default – the Irish government would have to learn to live responsibly within its means. Second, an exit from the Eurozonev would allow an exchange rate revaluation (or more correctly, devaluation) which would allow a stagnant economy a chance to recover. If one thinks that relying on IMF/EU/ECB et al. bailout funds (and there ensuing regulations and demands on the Irish citizenry) are more preferable to enticing a business-fueled recovery, I invite you to welcome the European technocrats with open arms. If I had to bet which horse to back in this recovery – the Irish businessperson or a Brussels-based bureaucrat – I think it is clear who offers a sounder plan for recovery.

And so, to revisit the mocking question: “Which country would you want to be living in right now?” I leave that to the Irish people still searching for safe footing as their once proud economy continues falling from grace.

BOOK REVIEWS

The Tragedy of the Euro

■ Brian Ó Caithnia

One of the most exciting publications during the Christmas season was a book by Prof. Philipp Bagus entitled “The Tragedy of the Euro”. Bagus is an associate professor of economics at Universidad Rey Juan Carlos, Madrid and a visiting professor at Prague University. He has long been one of the most vocal critics of the monetary union as he cried, like the ill-fated Cassandra, in vain for fiscal sanity during the boom. He has now provided us with the intellectual muscle needed to counter the propaganda and spin advanced by the intellectuals and fanatics of Euroland.

His introduction lays out clearly what he intends the reader to learn from his book:

The project of the Euro has been pushed by European socialists to enhance their dream of a central European state. But the project is about to fail. The collapse is far from being a coincidence. It is already implied in the institutional setup of the EMU, whose evolution we will trace in this book. The story is one of intrigue, and economic and political interests. It is a fascinating story in which politicians fight for power, influence and their own egos.

In this work he traces how differing concepts of European unity have been fighting it out for decades. On the one side are the founders of the European project, men such as Konrad Adenauer from Germany, Robert Schuman from France and Alcide de Gaspari from Italy, all practicing Catholics. Their view was of a Europe of independent sovereign states who cooperated in the removal of the protectionist walls and tariffs that had crippled European trade in the 1930s, brought about vast food shortages and brewed toxic hostility between nations. Their view of Europe Bagus describes as “the Christian view” of Europe, built largely upon the Catholic social teaching of “subsidiarity”, the idea that social matters ought to be handled by the smallest, lowest or least centralized competent authority.

Opposed to “the Christian view” of Europe was what Bagus describes as the “socialist view” or “empire view” of Europe. These men, many of whom were of French extraction such as Jacques Delors and François Mitterrand, dreamed of a single European government ruling the entire continent. They were simply the resurrection of the pre-war ideologues of Europe in new clothes who sought the annihilation of national identity and Europe's cultural legacy.

In the midst of all this lay the central problems of European unification, especially the currency problem. Bagus brilliantly re-counts the political and economic warfare that took place behind the scenes in the decades leading up to the establishment of the European Monetary Union. In particular, he explains how the French government held Germany to ransom and threatened to prevent the unification of East and West Germany lest Germany sacrifice its treasured Deutschmark to the EMU.

To the layman, this is an essential read to understand how the international banking system operates and why it is so unstable. To Bagus, the clock is ticking down before a crisis an order of magnitude greater than the current one humbles Europe to its knees. He is intent to ensure that the layman can articulate what the causes were and what the solution has to be so he will not be led astray by the plethora of poorly thought-out solutions the public is presented with as being “the only alternative”. The solution of course is a return to the rule of law in the banking system that has been given special privileges for too long in the name of the unsound and destructive economic doctrine of Keynesianism.

Prof. Bagus is also a man of great generosity and he has placed his work in the creative commons so it is available to download for free from the Ludwig von Mises Institute at the following link: <http://mises.org/resources/6045/The-Tragedy-of-the-Euro> Physical copies can also be purchased on the same site should one desire it to hand around to friends.

Andy Thomas' TRUTH AGENDA

■ Dave Derby

Upon opening this book the first thing that impressed me was the beautiful quality of the book itself. Every page of good quality glossy paper with clear illustrations and photographs to support the well researched, clear and concise content.

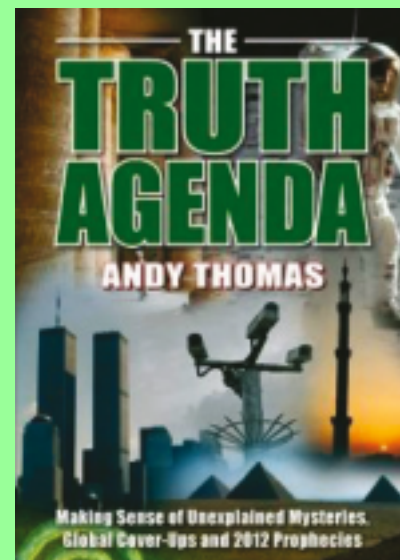

Andy has many years experience in researching every subject under the sun from the pyramids of Egypt to the emerging New World Order with its associated surveillance systems etc. His knowledge of revisionist history is mindblowing, as is his knowledge of the esoteric and of ancient astrology and mythology.

Andy does not force any of his views on you. As in his public talks, he presents this information to you as is - so you can come to your own conclusions. He has the unique ability to inspire you to further research this information yourself.

He presents his information and explores these subjects from many different angles, helping you to open your mind - to develop an enquiring mind - which is essential when you sincerely have the desire to get to the bottom of what is really going on in this world - and why.

Andy has a uniquely positive approach, whether it be during his public talks, or in written format. Reading The Truth Agenda is both a sobering and a positive experience. which I guarantee will change the way you see the world in many ways - no matter how knowledgeable you may be on these subjects.

I have purchased many copies of The Truth Agenda to give to friends and family as gifts, and would recommend this book as the perfect gift. Whether the receiver is an experienced 'truthseeker', someone who is just 'Waking Up' as it were, or to inspire others to start opening their minds and expanding their perceptions. Andy's unique style of writing will appeal to all.

A highly recommended read. A gripping production which you will truly find hard to put down!

NATIONAL HEALTH FEDERATION

A NON-PROFIT HEALTH-FREEDOM ORGANIZATION

IRELAND

David Massey

The NHF Ireland is about to launch with a massive campaign solely focussed on the fluoridation issue and to raise awareness of the controversy surrounding this mass medication. You're Minister for the Environment Mr John Gormley has publicly stated that fluoride was not safe for consumption by babies and that their milk formula should not be made using fluoridated water. He also stated that it was linked to bone cancer and dental fluorosis, John said that if the Green Party ever got into Government he would end this practice immediately. The facts are the effects of fluoride go way beyond cancer and dental fluorosis and more information can be found at WWW.THENHF.COM and WWW.FLUORIDEREPORTS.COM

Unfortunately John Gormley is no different than all politicians and when the Greens did finally get into government he has totally back flipped on the issue and it seems he is no longer concerned about Irelands babies and our ever increasing cancer epidemic. We all drink water and most of our bodies are made up of water. You cannot avoid fluoride in Ireland in the 21st century. Water fluoridation must stop. We demand the freedom to choose fluoride free water in Ireland.

Please contact David Massey at davidmassey@gmail.com to find out how you can help

WHAT IS NHF?

Established in 1955, the National Health Federation is an international nonprofit, consumer-education, health-freedom organization working to protect individuals' rights to choose to consume healthy food, take supplements, and use alternative therapies without government restrictions. With consumer members all over the world, and a Board of Governors and Advisory Board containing representatives from 7 different countries, the Federation is unique as being not only the World's oldest health-freedom organization for consumers but the only one accredited by Codex to attend and speak out at meetings of the Codex Alimentarius Commission, the highest international body on food standards.

WHAT IS CODEX?

Codex Alimentarius is Latin for 'Food Code.' The Codex Alimentarius Commission, based in Rome, Italy, and created in 1963, is an international organization jointly run by the Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) and the World Health Organization (WHO) of the United Nations. One of its 27 committees, the Codex Committee on Nutrition and Foods for Special Dietary Use (CCNFSDU) is responsible for Dietary Supplements and Special Foods. The CCNFSDU meets once yearly in Germany (its host country) and the National Health Federation is the only health-freedom group that is a Codex recognized organization with the right to attend, submit documents, interact in real time with other Codex delegates, and speak out at these meetings.

NEVER HEARD OF CODEX? THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT THEY WANT CODEX AGENDA:

Only low-potency, "me too" supplements available that will do nothing for your health - All or most foods genetically-modified and no way to know - Beneficial supplements unavailable or sold by prescription only.

All Coming to You in the Future, if Codex Has its Way

The NHF has been monitoring Codex meetings since the mid-1990s and actually present at these meetings since 2000. Having recognized the threat early on, the NHF obtained official Codex-recognized status as an INGO (International non-governmental organization), which allows the NHF the right to speak out for health-freedom at these Codex meetings and against this UK/EU Codex agenda. No other health-freedom organization has such status, so the NHF is unique in this respect and the lone nongovernmental voice at Codex for health freedom.

WHAT CAN YOU DO TO HELP FIGHT FOR OUR HEALTH FREEDOMS?

Be persistently vocal and contact your Members of Government to complain about the lack of representation by Irish representatives at Codex meetings. Remember, politicians do not see the light, they feel the heat. Write your clearly stated concerns, then call, e-mail, and also fax. Use every approach and do not flag. Write letters to the editor, educate friends and co-workers. It must be a grass-roots effort to save our health freedoms as history has shown that we cannot expect politicians and bureaucrats to do it for us.

Surely we at least have clean drinking water!?

Colin Ryan – www.WeAreChange.ie

The other day I was looking at recent photos from a younger relative's album, and I noticed something as I turned page after page of the smiling faces of their friends. Something jumped out at me immediately as being painfully and obviously wrong. In every picture, every one of these smiling teenagers had brown and yellow teeth. Not one good white set amongst them and yet these are all middle class families with good dental hygiene. All of those handsome young adults' smiles were destroyed by discoloured enamel. I was shocked and decided to investigate because this was not how I remember teeth when I was growing up, nor is it what I see from people I meet from other countries.

What I was seeing was the result of a lifetime of drinking fluoridated water, from the tap, the bottle to the pint. The staining, flaking and pitting of the teeth enamel is caused by the interference in the laying down of the enamel layers during the formation of the teeth by the compound commonly known as Fluoride, which is added to our water supply.

Now it is an age old adage that the teeth are a window into the health of the body. Slave traders would always check the teeth of a potential purchase. So is this an indication of more serious problems in the body?

Fluoride can be used as an insecticide, in rat poison and as an ingredient in military nerve gas. A lethal dose of fluoride can in fact kill a human being in just two hours. The toxicology report describes sodium fluoride as a "protoplasmic poison" which means that when it is dissolved in water it becomes readily absorbed through the mouth, throat and digestive tract. It can also be absorbed through the skin while you bathe and even inhaled.

The symptoms of fluoride poisoning are many and varied, depending on exposure, ranging from nausea, abdominal problems and sores to more serious problems like damage to the kidneys, thyroid gland, pineal gland, bone cancer, osteoporosis and neurological damage.

This is all common knowledge! So you may ask, "What on earth is causing the inertia in Ireland on the issue of fluoride?" All around the world the practice of fluoridating water has been exposed as unsafe and it has been removed from the supply. Yet here in Ireland the advocates for its removal seem to be running into a stone wall of intransigence from the various government departments in the face of overwhelming evidence and best practice in other countries. No other country in Europe bar Britain (partially) fluoridates water.

Following this story over the years one couldn't help but conclude that there was a determination to keep fluoride in the water regardless of whatever evidence is presented, even to the point of defending the indefensible. So who is blocking this and why are they doing it?

Pressure has been mounting on the politicians of late. From what I have heard first hand there have been a plethora of people contacting representatives about this issue, especially the Green Party members of government. John Gormley himself promised some of my associates that the fluoride issue was currently under review and he was awaiting a new report. Although when pressed on why this report has not been published he had no answer.

His last report criticising fluoridation in 2006 was blocked at the Joint Oireachtas Committee on Health and Children by the government. Indeed John Gormley seemed to have grasped the nettle back in 2007 when he went on RTE Prime Time and demanded fluoride be removed citing the terrible scourge of dental fluorosis that is affecting 40% of our children now and the risk of bone cancer. However since he went into government he seems to have done a u-turn.

It seems to be government policy to continue to add this poison regardless of whatever evidence is placed in front of them. On investigation I find there is very little independent science backing the use of fluoride and this is borne out by the York University report from 2000 which concludes "Given the level of interest surrounding the issue of public water fluoridation, it is surprising to find that little high quality research has been undertaken".

Recently printed in The Examiner (25/01/2010) was a damning letter from Kathy Sinnott highlighting the terrible downside of fluoride ingestion, but up until this the mainstream media have been conspicuous by their absence on this very serious issue.

Not that there is a lack of information for them to report on and force the Department of Health to answer the difficult questions. For instance we have the 2002 North South report which highlighted the fact that children in the Republic had three times the incidence of dental fluorosis than those in the Northern Ireland, who did not fluoridate, and that the incidence had increased seven fold between 1984 and 2002.

In 2001 a group of dentists (IDOF) also broke ranks with the mainstream view this decade and brought a case against Mary Harney and her Health Department. This being the same pairing that have since continued to push the HPV vaccine against the backdrop of all the deaths and injuries from the vaccine in the US and Britain. This also being the same pairing who are still behind the continued push to vaccinate every child with the H1N1 vaccine even after the EU Commissioner for health declared it a fraud. So there is clearly a very poor and complicit track record to consider here.

Even now in the US the Centre for Disease Control and the American Dental Association have issued guidelines that fluoridated water should not be given to children under four nor mixed with baby milk formula. The Food Safety Authority of Ireland reported the same thing to the government. However pressure seems to have been applied by government and now they have changed their finding, omitting the desire to stop fluoridating water and replaced it with a statement that all mothers should breast feed, though how this helps most children over a year isn't explained.

There are even newer reports available now from the US highlighting the clear correlation between fluoridated water areas and the increased incidences of bone cancer, osteoporosis and broken bones, so why are these reports being ignored in Ireland?

SAY NO TO FLUORIDE IN IRELANDS WATER

The Most Evil Corporation in The World!

by Mike Adams, the Health Ranger, NaturalNews

After taking nominations for the Most Evil Corporation of the Year survey from our readers, we hosted an online survey that allowed readers to vote on this question. Over 16,000 readers voted in our online survey from January 5 through 9, 2011.

Astonishingly, fifty-one percent of all votes went to Monsanto as the Most Evil Corporation of the year. This means Monsanto wins the top prize by a huge margin.

Taking second place was the Federal Reserve, with twenty percent of the votes. This is especially intriguing because it means that NaturalNews are well informed about the fact that the Federal Reserve is not a government entity but rather a corporate entity that serves the profit interests of the global banking cartel.

The other corporations included in the survey (along with their vote results) are:

British Petroleum 9%
Halliburton 5%
McDonalds 3%
Pfizer 2%
Merck 2%
Wal-Mart 2%
Nestle 1%
Other 7%

(Note: The total slightly exceeds 100% due to rounding on the part of the survey host.)

Why is Monsanto considered so evil?

The results of this survey beg the question: Why is Monsanto considered so evil, to the point where it garnered a full 51 percent of the vote?

The first and most obvious answer to that question may be that people who dislike Monsanto tend to be NaturalNews readers. There is undoubtedly a self-selection trend in this survey. But even among those readers who are into natural health, green living, organic foods and the like, why would Monsanto stand out above British Petroleum, for example, which caused enormous damage to the Gulf Coast in 2010?

The answer, I suspect, is that Monsanto behaves like an evil corporation that pretends to be angelic. The Monsanto website is an orgy of touchy-feely corporate spin that tries to position the company as the savior of life on planet Earth.

For example, the Monsanto website hosts the "Monsanto pledge" which contains the following sickening claims: Integrity - Integrity is the foundation for all that we do. Integrity includes honesty, decency, consistency, and courage. Sharing - We will share knowledge and technology to advance scientific understanding, to improve agriculture and the environment, to improve crops, and to help farmers in developing countries.

To anyone who knows anything about Monsanto, these words must strike them as particularly nauseous. For a company that thrives on GMO seeds and is an aggressive opponent of open-pollinated seeds to talk about "sharing knowledge" and "helping farmers" is enough to make you quite literally vomit.

Monsanto's pledge continues: Respect - We will respect the religious, cultural, and ethical concerns of people throughout the world. The safety of our employees, the communities where we operate, our customers, consumers, and the environment will be our highest priority. Given that Monsanto's GMO crops are now linked to roughly 200,000 suicides of farmers and farm workers in India you really have to wonder where this "respecting the cultural concerns of people" line could possibly come from.

A corporate mental patient

Touring the official Monsanto website, in fact, is a lot like walking through the mind of a madman whose self delusion has reached the point of complete psychosis. Monsanto runs around the world operating much like a mental patient, albeit a mental patient with a tremendous amount of political clout and economic power. And to oppose Monsanto is to put yourself at great risk.

Just ask all the politicians in France and across Europe who found themselves being added to a "retaliatory target list" that was assembled by the United States ambassador to France, working in conspiracy with the leaders of the GMO industry.

A lot of corporations are greedy (Goldman Sachs). Many are downright criminal (Big Pharma). But only a few corporations rise to the title of being considered truly and irreversibly evil. That's where Monsanto apparently takes the top prize.

Oh, and by the way, this isn't the first time Monsanto has received top honors. Forbes Magazine gave Monsanto its "Company of the Year Award" in 2009. And that tells you just about everything you need to know about the values of Forbes Magazine, too. Never let planetary health stand in the way of a quarterly profit!

ABOUT US

The objective of the Sovereign Independent is to provide critical news, information and education that the mainstream media, for the most part, refuse to print regarding the direction Ireland, and the world, is heading with its increasing loss of sovereignty and independence. As the world is moving toward an Orwellian New World Order at an ever accelerating pace there is an ever increasing need to contract the deception that most of the mainstream media are feeding to the masses. We have spearheaded a campaign to distribute printed media to the world in which we only offer whole truth. We hope we can inspire many others to do the same.

We are a non-partisan newspaper. All of the information printed is well researched and verified. The Sovereign Independent is produced by volunteers and funded by donations. We are not sponsored by any organisation or political party, neither left nor right in our political views as the entire left/right paradigm has failed.
